Missouri Southern State College
Joplin, Missouri 64801-1595

It is everything. . . and everywhere. It can take the form of many objects. . . spherical shapes hanging on walls or hugging tables and desks, comprised of twelve numbers and three different-sized arms. Cubes with bright, glowing numbers that brighten a midnight-black room. Days, weeks, and months. Calendars. Majestic Stonehenge in England, perhaps.

Time changes Missouri Southern State College. She has sat proudly upon her grass-covered throne. . . dignified, a scepter, a beacon of education. A single, lone day. . . ten days. A month. . . ten months. Five years. Ten. Decades. She has seen them all, and has withstood the rigors of nature for a great amount of time.

Winter. . .

shivering in its icy breath. . . cloaked in a snowy, white robe that is so beautiful to behold but so harsh to bear.

Spring. . .

a rebirth. The cloak is removed, and new life breathes through the warm winds, reviving and refreshing.

Summer. . .

from warm and pleasant to hot and uncomfortable. Sweaty, grimy, gritty. From one extreme to the other. It is rough, almost unbearable, but she survives under the withering sun.

Autumn. . .

a sigh of relief. Heat still rides the steeds of the wind, but coolness tags along, breathing a mixture that is a pleasant sensation to her skin. . .

She is a warrior. . . and persists as the cycle begins again.

LIFE

Missouri Southern was conceived many years past, small . . . weak but strong in intelligence . . . and thus it did not take her long to make a name for herself. But . . . like life . . . she experiences great happiness . . . and great sorrow. Joy in the form of the growing ranks of students, whom she embraces with the utmost love . . . and the nearing birth of a communications and social science building, a new addition to her flock of cement, gray-painted children. Anguish for the loss of Senator Richard Webster, a very close friend . . . and the death of a historical landmark, the burning of the Barn Theater.

She is a warrior . . . and will keep on embracing the delights and enduring the devastations of life.

It is a tiny, blue-green gem of a planet floating through the silent, star-sparkled universe, innocent in its appearance and beautiful beyond belief. It consists of seven, huge continents surrounded by oceans of azure water, and holds over five billion people within her womb.

She is a school and campus that stands at attention day and night...a guardian. Teacher. She consists of thirty buildings, surrounded by oceans of green grass and sighing trees, and holds over six thousand students within her womb. Missouri Southern, in her own way, is a world, too... and as the world reaches out to her. . . she keeps on returning the favor. . . by meeting the needs of both the region and those abroad to better not only education but the environment as well.

Change plays a big role in the factors of time, life, and the world; and Missouri Southern will not be left out....she will change to become better. On the other hand, she will always hold the values and beliefs that have brought her to this point, striving to stay with the times and the future... but never forgetting the important past.

Minutes, hours, days, years and decades. . .she has witnessed them all, yet we know that she will reign for the minutes, days, years, and decades that are yet to come. And, it is hoped, the centuries, as well.

Let's save it

In 1970, millions of people nationwide gathered to learn what could be done to keep from further destroying the environment. April 22, 1990 was the 20th anniversary of Earth Day, and for many it was the first time they had ever heard of such a thing. It seems that the issue has been on the back burner for quite awhile. Recent years have shown a re-emergence of environmental concern on a large scale. Musicians and other public figures have taken environmental stands and passed this cause onto their fans. Membership in groups such as Green Peace has grown significantly with this renewed popularity.

On April 22nd and 23rd, Missouri Southern held its own Earth Day activities. Many local musicians showed up to entertain the crowd that assembled on Sunday to participate. Exhibits were set up to inform people of environmental problems and what the individual can do to help. Monday, lectures were held in Matthew's Hall, and t-shirts were available commemorating Earth Day 1990. The t-shirts included a complete list of the musicians who performed and the saying "We did not inherit the land from our fathers, we are borrowing it from our children." This emphasizes the effect our actions will have on future generations.

The future of the earth is a popular topic. It's important to keep in mind that this is real and not just a trend. If actions had been taken in 1970 the problem would probably not be as big as it is today. The environmental movement is more publicized now than it used to be. Let's hope it's still saveable.

Only time will tell if man is serious about saving the environment. Hopefully there won't be any people puzzled at Earth Day's 40th anniversary. ♻️

AN HISTORICAL LANDMARK

THE BARN THEATRE

The loss of a legend

This year's day of giving thanks will always be remembered in the archives of Missouri Southern's history as the day tragedy struck. On the eve of the famous holiday, an employee of Southern's safety and security force had just driven to the Ellis Young Gymnasium when he was warned, perhaps by the mysterious sixth sense, that something was not right. Seconds later, he spotted the blaze, an inferno that licked with searing tongues of flame the forty year old wood of the historical Barn Theatre. In moments, it was swallowed up in heat and smoke.

"That night was just too hectic to describe," said Bob Beeler, director of safety and security and the physical plant. "Dallas Fortner, safety and security department, the first person to spot the fire, was in the process of making his nightly rounds. At approximately 12:58 a.m., he keyed in at the Elvin Ummel Technology Building. After that was done, he got back into his vehicle and drove through the residence hall area, which is something we do many times during the long nights. Finally, he got to the gymnasium when he spotted the fire, a yellow glow shimmering on the horizon. That occurred at 1:10 a.m., so within a span of twelve minutes the Barn had gone up."

"The Joplin Fire Department is on our radio system, so they are a mere phone call away," Beeler said. "Dallas simply picked up the radio, switched channels, and informed them of the crisis. They were on the scene within five minutes. They did a phenomenal job!"

The death of the Barn Theatre, a legend and landmark, was quick, unexpected and painful, yet the birth was quite the opposite, mild spring weather instead of the cold, ominous, winds...and cheering voices instead of weeping ones.

"Actually, we fell in love with the old barn," said Duane Hunt, theatre instructor and one of the founders, contributors, and supporters of the Barn Theatre. "We knew the school needed a performing arts center when the college moved to this area in the 1960's, and so Milton Brietzke and I jumped on the idea of renovating the two barns that stood on the campus grounds. We knew it would be unique to this area, since the closest barn theater lay thousand of miles away in the state of New York. Making the birth of the Barn even more special was the appearance of Dennis Weaver. The famous actor from Joplin, inaugurated the Barn in 1968 before its first major live performance, although no champagne was broken over the stage or anything like that," said Hunt.

In the form of shoveling manure, Hunt and others worked into 1969 remodeling the old barn, turning the loft into the stage and a seating area that could seat more than one hundred people, and the ground floor into the lobby, the all important dressing room and a work room. Until 1976, which marked the debut of the huge Thomas E. Taylor Performing Arts Center, the tiny structure hosted four shows a year including plays, musicals, and choir concerts. But, its usefulness would not end there.

"The Barn remained a theatre of a different sort," said Hunt. "The Campus Activities Board began showing films instead of live shows from 1976 to 1988, yet it was also home for individual student projects and History Day events and ceremonies. It was kept very busy." Though the Barn was shut down during the spring of 1989 due to fire regulations, nobody could believe what would happen only a year later, on one of the happiest American holidays.

"I received word of the fire at 9 a.m. on Thanksgiving morning, and I hopped into my car to face the worst," said Hunt. Surprise, sadness, and anger were the three emotions crossing Hunt's senses when he looked at the Barn.

"Surprise, at first," Hunt said. "I did expect to see a pile of black ash, ruin, debris and smoking boards sticking out into the air like ribs, but the barn was just sitting there...gaping hole in the roof...testimony that a fire had even occurred. The second emotion, of course was sadness...not so much for the theatre department but for the college and area, because a real piece of history was gone. But when I learned that in all probability arson was involved, my sadness turned to anger. To this day, I cannot imagine why anybody would do such thing...what purpose was served by doing it? The fire department, who had five vehicles and seventeen men, did an excellent job, saving the barn. ♻️ Kevin McClintock

PIANO COMPETITION

Music crosses all boundaries

Listen! Do you hear the silence? It starts as a hush in the first row of seats, travels slowly toward the back row, then develops into silence as a handsome young man in tails and cummerbund walks to the grand piano and sits. With hands suspended above the ebony and ivory board, he is a study in silent motion. He begins to play.

The audience is completely mesmerized as the first strains of music float over the darkened hall. The young man knows the competition will be tough; it always is at the Missouri Southern International Piano Competition.

Contestants representing thirteen countries participated in the Third Missouri Southern International Piano Competition held in April 1990. Contacting schools overseas to promote awareness in the competition is one way that Director Vivian Leon hopes to ensure bigger and better competitions.

"We need to spread the word and involve pianists from other countries," said Leon. "We are working toward becoming a major International Piano Competition but we are pretty much in our infancy," said Leon.

With the competition in its beginning stages, starting on the right note by contacting schools of music in other countries is a must. Central America, Asia, Europe, South America, and Canada all have excellent schools of music and their students are potential contestants.

The rules of the competition are very tough. There are only a certain number of competitors who can be accepted into the semifinals.

"The pianists have to compete for the privilege of participating in the Missouri Southern International Piano Competition," Leon said. Interested pianists submit a tape for preliminary auditions. The very best are then selected by the screening committee. Three faculty members in the music department at Southern comprise the screening committee for the contestants. The judges of the competition are world class pianists. Many of them are so impressed with the quality of the competition that they desire to return as judges for future competitions at Southern.

The piano competition occurs every two years and preparations are already in the works for the 1992 competition.

"We have just completed a poster to announce our 1992 competition featuring our 1990 winners," Leon said. "We want to honor them for their accomplishments and show future competitors that this indeed is high caliber."

The Missouri Southern International Piano Competition can be called high caliber when a contestant flies in on the last day of semifinals from competition in Belgium to compete at Southern because she heard that it is worth it. By word of mouth, posters or a letter writing campaign, something is paying off for the dedicated people who work so hard to make the competition a success. Inquiries are arriving from Russia, West Germany, and Armenia.

Involvement is a key ingredient for the success of past competitions and for future ones as well. Director Leon feels that one of the wonderful things happening for the success of the competition is the excellent community support it receives. The community makes major contributions by giving financial assistance, providing host families, and supporting through attendance. In addition, the media gives excellent support to the competition by their coverage.

"This is a team effort involving many wonderful people on and off campus," Leon said. She also compliments the planning committee that provides ideas, time and effort in making the piano competition a success. ♻ Christina S. Watkins

Home to caring, involved, passionate people willing to make a difference, Missouri Southern takes a stand on global and environmental issues. From sabbaticals for faculty to student exchange programs, from campus recycling to highway beautification programs, Missouri Southern is making a difference in the world.

We the people of Southern, are citizens of the world, traveling as far as Russia to learn, care and live with new friends; as near as Main street, U.S.A. to feed, clothe, and share with new friends. This interaction expands learning and global cooperation.

GETTING PERSONAL

Read my bumper

Parking lots at Southern have one thing in common--well actually two. 1. They have parked cars. 2. They have an increasing number of parked cars with personalized license plates.

As with personalities, no two license plates are the same. Some use names such as "JACKIE-S" or "TISHA-M" and then there are those that surpass the boundaries of imagination such as "CNSYDE", "2HOT", or "SHU-ZAM."

Car owners with personalized plates have certain criteria in common; they want to be different and they want to be noticed as they drive on by.

Sophomore Amy Gardner, early childhood education major, says that her license plate was a result of her brothers' having personalized plates. Because they did, she wanted one, too.

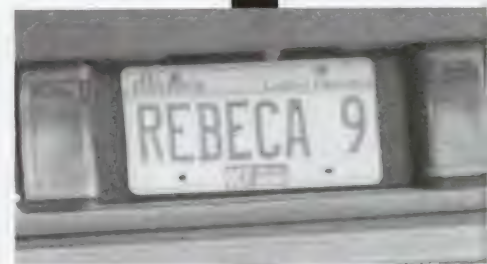

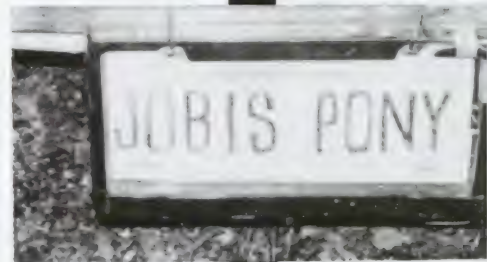

"It kind of gives your car an identity," she said. Her plates say "IMAMYG", literally translated as "I'm Amy G."

Personalized license plates are everywhere and say anything, from "ALGAE" to "AZX4U2."

"It was my first car so I wanted something different," said Kelly Trammel, freshman elementary education major. "I wanted 'TRAMMEL' but I couldn't get it, so I got 'MUST-I' instead."

Being different seems to be the main reason for personalized plates, which is why some students have their names on their plates. It is relatively simple to purchase personalized plates by paying an extra $25, choosing six letters or numbers plus a dash. Thus, students can have their unique license with a special message. But remember, every license plate is different! ♻️ Jennifer Pasceau

MAKING IT PERSONAL

SENIOR PERSPECTIVE

"There is life after a 'C'"

Live life to the fullest and try new things is the motto of Dee Buffalo, senior English major. "Do not stand still; live life and experience life," Buffalo counsels.

She certainly has not stood still in her own life. After her divorce at age 27, she went into the Army. She was in the last graduating class of WACs in 1973. After that year the Army integrated the women with the men. She was placed in charge of all the mail for Ft. Leavenworth. While there, she was also the first woman allowed into the military prison to train the detainees to handle their own mail.

"It was a battle to be able to go into the prison, but it was my job and I got that across to my superiors," Buffalo said. "The detainees were great; they were awed by a woman being there. I never had any trouble out of them."

The 44-year old has definite ideas about being a non-traditional student in college today.

"Being around the younger people keeps me up-to-date on the younger generation," Buffalo said. "We bridge generations. It keeps me young." She also goes to school with her 20-year old son, Matt Buffalo who is a sociology major.

"I am also majoring in sociology," she said. "We don't have any trouble being at Southern together. He can't relate to my literature classes, but we sit and talk sociology all day long."

Buffalo believes non-traditional students have different sets of problems that college authorities need to address. "Non-trads face extra stress and strive to be perfect in everything. We have a hard time accepting our own limitations. It takes us awhile to let ourselves be human. But, there is life after a 'C'," Buffalo said with a smile.

"Also, many non-trads are fearful of life after college," she commented. "I know many non-trads that keep changing their majors just to stay in school because they are afraid they can't make it in the real world.

"I would like to see a support group set up to help non-trads deal with these and other issues," Buffalo said. "The traditional method of education does not work with the non-trads," Buffalo believes it will be hard to get back into the real world.

"There is a mindset to going to school," she said. "It will take a good six to eight months to get used to not living in semesters for one thing. Also, college is such a secure and warm environment that it is going to be hard to leave it," she said.

After graduation, Buffalo will go into the Peace Corps. She plans to get her master's after her term expires. "I will be going to Czechoslovakia to teach English to their teachers. Since the government has been reformed, they need someone to teach their teachers English so that they can teach the rest of the people," she says. "I need a little time away from school to see the real world again. I think the Peace Corps can do that for me. As students we all get wrapped up in our own little academia and forget there is a world outside," she says.

"In every English major there is a great American novel waiting to be born," Buffalo said. "I like to write, and I would do so on a regular basis if I thought I could write and eat at the same time. I would like to write like Flannery O'Connor and have the fun of William Faulkner. Not everybody can write; it is either innate or non-existent. Those of us who can write are pushed by it." One day she hopes to be writing for a living but for now she is happy publishing some short stories in magazines.

Buffalo says she cannot see herself as others do, but she knows how she wants herself to be seen. "I want to be seen as someone real, someone honest, 'what-you-see-is-what-you-get'," Buffalo said with a smile.

TIME WELL SPENT

Why is Southern Soooo great

The staff of the 1990-91 yearbook was given a list of reasons explaining why Missouri Southern State College is "so great". Being deadline dopey one day we began a journey down the "yellow brick road" or in our case the concrete sidewalk and came up with the pictures you see on this spread. Our intention was not to offend but to create with words and pictures a fun page. Other pages in this book show the real Southern but these pages show what can happen when a group of people work until the eleventh hour.

The campus of Missouri Southern State College is artistically arranged among the slightly sloping hills at the intersection of Newman and Duquense roads. The founding fathers sought to create not only an excellent institution of learning but to create it in such a way that it would add to the natural beauty of the surrounding grassy meadows. Modern day Southern provides grace, beauty and an education second to none.

Each year at Southern is marked by some type of construction enhancing the beauty of the campus but more importantly creating a bigger and better education facility for its students. This past summer new dormitories were built to house the ever increasing number of students who choose to attend Southern. Future plans include a new building to house the communications department and the social sciences department. Ground has been broken and construction has begun.

Southern offers a variety of majors to fit the needs of anyone. A program is offered in connection with the University of Missouri at Rolla for those wishing to receive an engineering degree. This program allows students to complete their basic courses at Southern and then transfer to Rolla to complete their degree.

Southern has caring and concerned staff and faculty to educate and prepare students to enter their chosen career.

With an Olympic size indoor swimming facility, Southern can offer a wide selection of aquatic courses such as water safety, advanced life guarding, water aerobics and have time left over for individual swimming and exercise under the watchful eyes of a lifeguard.

There are 12 shopping centers within a ten minute drive of the campus. This figure does not include the many stores located on Main Street which is only five minutes away.

Compared to other colleges and universities around the U. S., the cost of attending Southern is considerably less expensive.

All in all these photos are just a funny glance behind the words submitted; what is not funny is that Southern has many reasons to wear the title of "sooooo great". Lack of space limits a complete list of Southern's greatest features but it's available by request. Christina Watkins

LOVE OXFORD STYLE

Romance is alive and well at Southern

On the Eiffel Tower overlooking Paris or at some other memorable spot in the capital of romance, William Roderique planned to propose to his high school sweetheart. However, they never made it to France, so he popped the question around midnight over a load of clean laundry in Oxford, England. Roderique, a 1987 graduate of Webb City High School, went to Oxford last summer as part of a study abroad program. He was there for three weeks with 20 other Missouri Southern students.

His sweetheart, also a 1987 graduate of Webb City, was unsuspecting of his plans.

"I had no idea," said Cheryl Chapman, a marketing and management major who had gone to England to attend the same program. "We had never once looked at rings," she said.

Roderique, she said, "carried the engagement ring in his pocket for a week waiting for the right time to ask me."

Before leaving the states, Roderique mentioned his plans to friends and spoke with Chapman's family. They kept his intentions among themselves. "Nobody told me," said Chapman.

Chapman, returned last summer to find that everyone had known of Roderique's plans before she did. According to Chapman the engagement was favorably accepted by the families. "They were all saying 'Well, it's about time, '"said Chapman. "They all thought it was sweet--how he did it."

Roderique considered many places to propose. "A friend thought I should do it on the London Bridge, but that is in Arizona now," he said.

According to Chapman, proposing after they had finished their laundry at midnight was romantic enough because, she said, "It was such a surprise. He had a really strange look on his face."

Chapman said Roderique proposed on one knee. "I was so surprised, I didn't know whether he was serious or not," she said. Later she joked with him that it was about time he asked.

Roderique and Chapman began dating in the seventh grade but not steadily until the last five years, according to Chapman.

William, said Chapman, is very personable. "He is the best friend anyone could have."

Roderique and Chapman plan to wed this summer.

On order to qualify for the Oxford program, both Roderique and Chapman were assessed according to their grade point average and essays turned into the sponsors. Florida State University arranged the trip and Southern gave qualified students a $1,000 scholarship.

Roderique took a class at Oxford called "Queen Victoria and her Ministers," while he waited for the right moment to propose.

While at Oxford, Roderique had a "great time" except for experiencing the pre-proposal jitters. "We saw ■ Standing in front of Alice in Wonderland's door in Christ Church's Cathedral Gardens, Oxford, England, seniors William Roderique and Cheryl Chapman, were presented with flowers upon the announcement of their engagement.

Buckingham Palace and Madame Tussaud's Wax Museum, " he said. London surprised him with all of its sites and activities. After classes in the morning, he and other students had an hour break for tea or coffee, then "ran around Oxford" during the afternoon.

Roderique explained that Oxford is not an traditional college as found in the United States. Thity-five seperate colleges make up Oxford. He attended Christ's Church, which he described as being enclosed behind walls with a gate students use for entry to the complex.

Roderique and Chapman came to Southern because, she said, they wanted to be together and close to home.

While attending Southern, they joined Phi Beta Lambda, the group which last fall sponsored Chapman as a Homecoming royalty candidate.

To her credit, Chapman also has membership in Phi Eta Sigma, a freshman honors society, and in Omicron Delta Epsilon, the economics club. She joined ODE as a junior and became president while a senior.

Roderique participated in the honors program and held membership in the National Association of Accountants during his junior and senior year.

Roderique says he chose accounting because he liked mathematics, and he had found accounting easy in high school. Unlike many students who change majors with every semester, Roderique remained steadfast, although not always enthusiastic about his choice.

"I hung with it all these years," he said.

Graduation marks a mile-stone for his family. As the "spoiled" youngest of a family of eight, he is the last to attend college. His graduation and marriage will leave his parents with an empty nest.

In retrospect, Roderique and Chapman both say that if they could change something about their college years at Southern, they would have been more involved in organizations and attended more campus sponsored activities. ♻️

PROCRASTINATION

NO! Not that again

Procrastination is a disease that effects all of us at one time or another. It begins with laziness. You may start to do something and find yourself curiously searching for other things to do first.

It is Sunday night and you have piles of homework due tomorrow. Wait! You forgot that you HAVE to watch the news. It has been at least four months since you last saw it, and you need to catch up on current events. Surely your professor will understand. Don't forget that huge iceberg of laundry you still have to do. Fresh underwear comes before homework any day. It is about time you wrote your grandmother in Vermont. What was her last name again?

Look at the time! You better go to bed and worry about your homework in the morning.

What time is it now! Nine thirty. Class started at eight. Oh well I will go tomorrow instead.

If you have ever been in this situation, or one similar; you may have the first symptom of PROCRASTINATION.

Webster defines it as: to put off intentionally and reprehensibly the doing of something that should be done.

Support groups are springing up on campuses across the nation. Unfortunately due to "better things to do", most are inactive. ♻️ Paul Henderson Happiness could have been one way to describe Elivette Alvarez's feelings as she was announced Homecoming Royalty on October 5, 1990.

"They said my name and I said, 'Is that my name she called,'" said Elivette. "I didn't believe it. I was very nervous, but I didn't even realize they were going to announce the winner."

According to the 19-year-old sophomore accounting major, she received friendly "congratulations" from all the finalists.

"They each gave me a hug," she said. "They were all so sweet and sincere; it was nice of them. I thought they would act another way."

Alvarez, a resident of Puerto Rico, was sponsored by the Residence Hall Association.

She said her friends helped her by putting up signs around campus, helping her pick out a dress, and tape recording the Homecoming events.

"I sent a video to my parents (in Puerto Rico)," she said. "They were so happy. My mom was crying; she said it was like I was there with them."

"A lot of my friends in Puerto Rico called me and congratulated me," said Alvarez.

At the Homecoming parade, Alvarez said she experienced confusion. "I felt weird being up there and waving at people," she said. "My friends were telling me I was waving wrong. It was fun, though."

According to Alvarez, becoming Homecoming Royalty has changed a lot of things for her, specifically her identity at the college. Children at the Child Development Center where Alvarez works congratulated the new queen.

"I went to the English department asking for a stapler," she said. "One instructor said, 'Oh, she is the queen; she can have whatever she wants.'"

Alvarez came to Southern because her cousin, Gracie Agiles, a senior marketing major, told her about the program.

"I like Southern," she said. "It's a good college; people here are nice."

"In the future Alvarez said she will try to get her CPA."

"I would like to find a job here (in the United States)," she said. Maybe in Florida or Texas--not Alaska. It doesn't snow in Florida. I don't like snow." ♻️

THOUGHT FOR FOOD

So WHO is eating in the cafeteria?

Southern students have a choice of eating in the cafeteria or dining out. So what's new? Dormies usually eat in the cafeteria because their meals are paid and most parents would not agree to paying for extra meals. Given the choice, students might choose to tickle their tastebuds at one of the houses of cuisine sprinkled throughout the area. One of the newest and most fascinating is Club 609 located at 609 Main in downtown Joplin.

"It has never occurred to me to eat in the campus cafeteria..."

Marie Capps
Faculty

"My favorite place to eat is Club 609 because it has a great atmosphere and good food.

They have delicious salads, cashew chicken, croissants and original desserts," said junior Evelyn Fleenor.

In addition to Club 609 there are trusty standbys such as Pizza Hut. Pizza Hut offers a buffet luncheon and good pizza that fits about everyone's budget. "I like all kinds of pizza, that is why I eat at Pizza Hut," Brent Moore said.

If a sandwich is what you prefer, then check out Subway. Sandwiches, sandwiches, and more sandwiches are what Subway is all about. Subway offers specialties with extra special sandwich spreads. Any combination of meat and cheese you want, they can create. (They're on a roll.) Or as sophomore Jon Noirfalise, a man of few words, but excellent taste (buds) said, "eat at Subway."

So, there are cuisine, pizza, and sandwich shops where Southern students may eat. But, is there a campus cafeteria?

"It has never occurred to me to eat in the campus cafeteria, not at Montclair, the University of Maryland, or at Southern. I go off campus for a pastrami sandwich at Pronto because it reminds me of New Jersey," said Marie Capps, faculty member.

It is to be expected that, given a choice, students would rather dine off-campus instead of in the cafeteria. So who is eating in the cafeteria these days? ♻️

MAKING MONEY

WORKING FOR A LIVING

It is not as simple as it seems

Working their way through college is the way of life for many students at Missouri Southern. It is not uncommon for full-time students to have part-time or full-time jobs, which sometimes prevent them from experiencing everything college life has to offer.

Laura Pliler, a full-time sophomore education major said, "This is just the way it has to be; I have school, my apartment, and other expenses that have to be paid, so I have to work." Pliler works over 40 hours a week as assistant manager of a local convenience store. Pliler recommends anyone who can afford it, not work so they can concentrate on college and all it has to offer.

"The biggest disadvantage is that my grades have suffered."

John Poe

Senior, John Poe works over 40 hours weekly at VideoTech, while taking 16 semester hours and putting in 10 hours weekly at MSTV. He has paid his entire way through college, as well as having an apartment, a car and other bills. Although extra-curricular activities are certainly beneficial, Poe believes the biggest advantage is that his job is career oriented. He suggests that more people try to attain a job in their chosen field instead of settling for non-career oriented jobs. "I would have it no other way", said Poe. "The biggest disadvantage is that my grades have suffered. It is difficult but you make do."

Students who manage, in spite of a job, to participate in departmental and other campus activities get the most from their college experience. The students with a job know what we are talking about. ♻️

GET THE FACTS

AIDS EDUCATION

Orientation classes teach AIDS awareness

For the last several years AIDS (acquired immune deficiency syndrome) education has been a major concern of newspapers, television, public lectures, and community support groups.

However, with the all of the information available to the public there are still people who fear the disease because of a lack of education and understanding concerning AIDS.

Marty Conklin

Missouri Southern State College is working to increase AIDS awareness among students. Lifetime Wellness Director Marty Conklin, spoke to all freshman orientation classes concerning how AIDS is contracted and the fatality of the disease. In several lifetime wellness classes, volunteers from the Four State Community AIDS Project discussed the disease and provided information on how the students can become involved with the organization.

AIDS is a virus that attacks the immune system and damages the body's ability to fight diseases. AIDS is actually the final stages of a long series of health problems due to the infection with the HIV virus. AIDS is an opportunistic disease. Patients do not die of AIDS, they die because the body is no longer able to fight off infections. Since the body is unable to fight off the disease, the victim may die a slow and painful death.

In the lectures, the facts were stated bluntly. AIDS does not discriminate, between man, woman, white, black, Hispanic, Chinese, homosexual or heterosexual. The lectures cleared up many myths on the contraction of AIDS. You cannot catch

AIDS from casual contact (hugging, holding hands, etc.) or from toilet seats, pets, insects, tears or saliva. You can contract AIDS four ways: intimate sexual contact (passing bodily fluids); sharing of hypodermic needles; maternal to child transfer; or receiving blood transfusions from an infected donor. Now blood banks do extensive testing on the blood and blood products which greatly reduces the risks.

Interested persons may become involved with the Four State Community Aids Project project in Joplin. The volunteers do a variety of jobs at the project. They do office work, direct patient care and support services. The project was developed to educate the community, to give direct services to A I D S patients, as well as to give support to friends and family of people who have AIDS and live in the Joplin area. Students who are concerned that they may be infected with the virus can be confidentially tested.

"It is real. It is out there, and it is deadly. You have to educate and protect yourself."

A volunteer from the community project stated her opinion on how to approach AIDS patients, "Treat them with compassion. Do not condemn them. There is nothing you can tell them that they have not already told themselves." ♻️

NON-TRADITIONALS

Searching for education

Non-traditional students on the campus of Southern are here to stay. They are here updating their current skills, acquiring new skills, and enrolling in classes just to learn. "The non-traditional student brings experience and a maturity toward the continuation of their education," said Dr. R. Jerry Williams, Director for the Division of Continuing Education.

Some non-traditional students opt for enrollment in the continuing education program in lieu of regular student status. A degree typically is not what the student is wishing to obtain. Rather, personal satisfaction in knowing that they have completed the work and acquired knowledge in a specific area is what they seek.

"Choosing continuing education can be the less complicated route (no ACT or registration problems) but those that choose to join the ranks of regular students all agree that they are here for the same reason—to learn," said Williams. "MSSC is the best place for it as it is a very open and hospitable campus. There is no age limit on the MSSC campus for those that wish to learn."

Non-traditionals bring experience and maturity into the classroom, by helping traditional students see, feel, and even hear what they could only read about before.

"I have a gentleman in my class who is just a pleasure to have in class," said Virginia Laas, a history instructor. "He talked to the class at one time traditional student sitting at a table with traditional student studying together, sharing their knowledge with one another and enjoying each other's company.

In fact it is the norm at Southern. Friendship has no age barrier.

"They (traditional students) often see how organized we must be in order to get things done and that is good and positive for everyone; the college, the instructors and the traditional students," Laas said.

Sarncie Gilman is a freshman at Southern. She is married and a non-traditional student. Gilman, a student employee at Spiva Library, said of her job, "It makes me feel more like a student." She also said that studying or just finding the time to study is hard work too.

Motivation for Gilman to enroll in college came from her interest in computers. "I always wanted to use them (computers) and my high school did not offer a class in them. In order to get a better job in today's market and do what I wanted to do instead of about the depression and what happened to him. The other students were very interested in his experiences."

In many colleges and universities non-traditional students have a special place to gather and converse. At Southern there is not a special place because there has not been a need for one.

It is not uncommon to see a non-working in a restaurant I came back to school," she said.

Mary Palmer, a junior secondary education major, worked for the University of Alaska for eight years teaching adult education. Mary was offered a job here but decided to enroll and work toward her certification to teach full time.

"I have four teenagers, two work, two are in high school, and an 82 year old father. Trying to keep track of all of them, cook, sew, watch my son play football and then to try and find time to study—it is very hard," Palmer said, "I enjoy it very much."

Tonya Freund is married with children and grandchildren. She was born in the Pyrenean Mountains at a time when fathers told their daughters what they should do with their lives. Tonya was told that she wanted to be a doctor so she attended the University of Barcelona, Spain, for three years before marrying and then dropping out of school.

"I hated it. I always wanted to be a dress designer. I have taken art history, painting, jewelry, art composition and drawing," said Freund and I enjoyed every single one (class)."

There is an agreement among non-traditional students that although the learning is more difficult, they are more willing to do what it takes. For reasons as varied as the number of non-traditional students themselves, they provide a nice change of pace. They bring first hand information about the depression, international events and customs, as well as many other interests. ♻️

FRESHMAN BLUES

Have you hugged a freshman today?

Maybe the thought never occurred to you, but Southern is experiencing the largest number of freshmen on campus in the history of the college. Southern is also experiencing the largest amount of freshmen blues in the history of the college. People who can help combat this curable disease are counseling staff, dorm monitors, peer groups, roommates and friends. But sometimes none of these people are able to help. For instance, there was the day of the Missouri monsoon when no amount of sympathy could chase Brian Hirsch's blues away.

When asked to comment on the worst freshmen day he had lived through Hirsch said, "The worst day would have to be the day it rained very hard, and I got soaked."

Even though most freshmen feel lonely and homesick the first week, there is comfort in numbers. "Many freshmen feel the same way, so it is easy to find comfort with a classmate or your roommate," said Amanda Briseno. "Making friends that last a lifetime is part of college, so now is the time to get involved and participate, and then maybe your worries won't seem so bad."

Sometimes, though, it is hard to find that special plane or level of reality that smooths the way through the freshmen year. But there are freshmen on campus who have made an art out of surviving "Freshmen 101." Maybe by passing on this bit of wisdom from Christy Brown, it will be easier for future freshmen to survive the "Freshmen Blues".

"Being a freshmen at Southern can be a good experience, especially if you have the right attitude. But if you don't, just fake it like I do," said Brown.

The best day on campus is worth more than all the bad days added together. There comes the day when the rain stops and the rainbow is seen in the Southern sky. This begins the best days on campus and makes it all worth the loneliness and homesickness you may have thought would never end. The best day Hirsch said, "was when everything went my way and people started recognizing me."

Making it on your own is lonely, but it is part of the growth process and can be a rewarding experience. And one of the best days is when a freshman feels they belong, anywhere. Have you hugged a freshman today? ♻️

GRADUATION

A dream comes true

It is with a great deal of pride and affection that the faculty for the Bachelor of Science in Nursing present the Ipock Achievement Award to Lu Ann Ferson.

And it was with pride and affection that the family and friends of Lu Ann Ferson watched as she received the award at the pinning ceremony for graduating nurses. Some of the criteria for receiving the award are professionalism combined with a casual presentation, the ability to get along with people, time spent in community projects and organizational ability. The recipient must have a high rating in areas of initiative and industry, and also integration of knowledge and skills. He or she must then exhibit the proven ability to apply this knowledge to practice.

"We were all very proud of Lu Ann."

Mrs. Sam Ferson
Mother

"I was not surprised at all," said her father, Sam Ferson. "She deserves it. She has worked so hard." "We were all very proud of Lu Ann," added her mother. In 1987, Ferson returned to school at Missouri Southern State College to study for a Bachelor of Science in Nursing. She had graduated from St. John's School of Nursing in 1961, was a Navy nurse, a surgical nurse, and has specialized as an IV therapist. She was cited for professionalism by the president of Intravenous Nurses Society in Intravenous Journal, 1989.

Ferson, a non-traditional student at 54 years old, will continue her studies in graduate work toward a Master of Science in Nursing. ♻ Alice Gabriel

CULTURE CROSSINGS

Crossroads written in different

Crossroads staff is aware of the college's new focus this year and the adoption of the new slogan "Making a World of Difference." So with all of this change, the staff of Crossroads thought it only fitting that an international emphasis be included in the yearbook. Several people were responsible for research to find the different languages and spellings to make this possible. Although the original goal was to find 91 different languages (an ominous task in its self), only 26 languages were found to be recorded in Southern's history book.

We hope you enjoy the page and better understand the new focus of the college. You may have problems pronouncing the different spellings of crossroads. We certainly did. It could be said that we slaughtered hundreds of years of culture through poor pronunciation, but we had fun and even learned something in the process. ♻️

A NEW FOCUS

A global approach to undergraduate education

Missouri Southern State College plans to meet the twenty-first century at the crossroads. In the last decade Southern has concentrated and developed its core curriculum, bore MSTV and KXMS, sped up the computerization of the college, increased its economic precision, and developed an outstanding honors program.

"So as we enter the 1990's, Missouri Southern is a well respected, well received institution of higher learning. As such, we must continue to look to the future... it is our obligation," said President Julio Leon.

In June of 1990 at a Board of Regents meeting, Dr. Leon proposed a new mission for Missouri Southern: the International Focus.

"Let us be known in Missouri and in the region and perhaps in the country as the institution that specializes two ways: undergraduate education and, secondly, undergraduate education with an international emphasis," said Dr. Leon.

The new mission calls for focusing our energies in such areas as increasing the foreign languages, developing faculty and student exchange programs, increasing our number of international students, having faculty attend international conferences, bringing in persons of international stature, and working with the area schools to develop the global perspective.

In reshaping the curriculum with an international perspective, the most important development to be made is attitude—an international frame of mind.

"International understanding, language proficiency, geographic literacy have now become essential in an interdependent world where each country's survival depends on its ability to understand and cooperate with other nations," said Dr. Leon.

It's a small world...after all. ♻️

MEN WITH A MISSION

Pennsylvania Avenue will have to do without him because Dr. Julio Leon is keeping himself busy at 200 Hearnese Hall.

Completing his eighth year as president of Missouri Southern, Leon keeps a full schedule overseeing four schools which offer 37 undergraduate degrees.

Leon, a native of Chile, received his MBA from North Texas State University in 1968, and his doctorate in business administration from the University of Arkansas in 1973. He came to Southern in 1969 as an assistant professor of business administration, was promoted to associate professor in 1973, and in 1976 to full professor and dean of the school of business. He served as interim president from June, 1982 until appointed president in December, 1982.

Leon is active in professional organizations: Missouri Council on Public Education, American Association of State Colleges and Universities, Committee on Undergraduate Education.

Leon is a man with a mission: To continue to make Southern the best that it can be. ♻️

Dean Ray Malzahn, in his eleventh year of service to Southern, handles the affairs of the school of arts and sciences. The school of arts and sciences has nine departments: art, biology, communications, english, mathematics, music, physical science, social science, and theatre; arts and sciences employs fifty percent of the faculty and services about fifty percent of the student body.

As dean, Dr. Malzahn finds that his mission is to be helpful to the faculty under him and to support the mission of the school for the total education of each student. He states, "The plans for the school vary and are diverse. I am dedicated to making the college the best that it can be." ♻️

Dean James Maupin, the senior faculty member at Southern, is celebrating his thirty-sixth year of service. He began teaching at Joplin Junior College which is now Southern.

Dean Maupin knows that the school of technology graduates students that need to be prepared for our world's high technology and his goal for the school is to always keep the programs updated and to show the integration of technology to other fields.

The school of technology includes majors such as automobile technology, computer science, dental technology, drafting and design, industrial arts, law enforcement, military science, nursing, and radiology technology. ♻️

Gray became assistant dean in 1988 and moved this year into the position of acting dean of the school of business.

Gray feels that his job is to provide business faculty with the resources they need to educate students seeking business degrees. TOMORROW'S KEY

Opening the doors to the world

Peaceful co-existence within our world is becoming a possibility. However, one door still remains locked and impedes our progress. The key to that door is being able verbally to understand one another, taking another barrier out of the way. Language study creates the key that opens that door.

Vernon Peterson, associate professor of communications at Missouri Southern said, students have contributed to the winds of peace in the last five years by studying foreign languages.

"I have noticed a great upsurge in the interest in foreign languages in the past five years," said Peterson, "and it has been beyond our fondest hopes. This tells us that people are interested in languages. They want and yearn for the benefits gained by studying and mastering a foreign language. This upsurge makes us more marketable and our country more strong! In my lifetime I have witnessed four wars, which derive from greed, yes; but also from isolation, stereotyping and the lack of understanding someone's beliefs. If we connect more, if we try to put ourselves in that part of the world, if we try to understand the different variety of beliefs and customs, then we would be well on our way in finding a peaceful resolution of conflict between persons, states, and nations."

Southern offers a wide variety of foreign languages. Of the twelve most-spoken languages in the world, Southern's language instructors teach five: German, Russian, French, Spanish, Arabic plus a class in Latin. In the fall, Chinese and Japanese will be added.

Peterson states that when it comes to the benefits of learning a foreign language he can identify in three different applications: as a teacher, a person and as a small child.

"As a teacher, bridging the gaps of misunderstanding is probably best achieved through the language study," said Peterson. "We gain access to history, culture and the very nature of civilizations other than our own. The end of which then becomes the pursuit of peace."

"As a person", Peterson said, "the enjoyment and sheer fun that come from language mastery makes its role intrinsic. A part or parts of a person can be expressed and lived out through new sounds that reflect different and unique ways of thinking and feeling about life and the world.

"As a child, there is excitement that is engendered when you begin to understand and anticipate meeting people and sharing life with the persons whose language you are studying," Peterson said. An expectancy grows for travel and a desire to know and see for oneself and to participate in the larger world."

Coping and living inside the clutches of change, Peterson would like to see the birth of language programs expanded at Southern in the near future.

Peterson said, "While the large listings of new foreign languages seem very sudden, they are in fact the consequence of many years of hopes, and evaluations in planning. One thing I would hope to see in the not-so-distant future is the forming of intensive language programs. By saying intensive, I mean students can enroll in a beginning course and within two years have up to twenty hours of work. When I say this, I am stressing progress."

So, Missouri Southern moves into the future arming itself with a weapon, using languages as a tool for peace and a window for understanding customs and beliefs.

"Languages of other countries are much like a developed talent or skill in music, athletics or art...it gives meaning and pleasure to ourselves and others," said Peterson.

The word is getting out! All the news about Missouri Southern is getting around with the help of various publications. The public information office handles the recruitment advertisements, promotions, and news releases. Gwen Hunt, director of public information, says her job includes not only designing and printing the college catalog and play programs, but her office also writes, edits, designs, and produces radio, television, and newspaper ads as well. Hunt purchases coverage from Springfield to Joplin to Neosho to Nevada, depending on the event.

Jo Ann Hollis is in charge of the Southern's news bureau service.

Working with public information is Dennis Slusher, director of sports information. His job is to print the game programs, get sports news releases out, and make sure the media are notified for special sports events.

Students get in on the act, too. Every week Southern journalists show their talents through student publication, The Chart.

The Chart expresses student views through features and editorials. With help from the adviser Chad Stebbins, The Chart reports current affairs on campus, in the city of Joplin, and in the world.

Graduates of Southern can keep in touch though the help of Larry Meacham. He edits Southern, the alumni bulletin which prints the changes and events at Southern. It also highlights who's who and who is doing what, where. ☐ Michele Jansen

AIRING SOUTHERN

Broadcasting the College

It's a bird! It's a plane! It's Southern on the air! Whether you are scanning the radio band or flipping television channels, Southern's signal is coming in strong. Located in the former guest house on Mission Hills estate, (KXMS 88.7) on the FM dial and MSTV (cable channel 18) plus low power channel K57DR all provide laboratory facilities to teach students the technical and ethical needs of broadcasting and media, but the purpose of each entity differs. KXMS addresses the aesthetic needs of the tri-state area and promotes an appreciation of the arts. KXMS prides itself on its programming, playing classical music in stereo twenty-four hours a day.

Missouri Southern Television focuses more on student and community productions. With specialized and localized programming, many organizations have an opportunity for exposure, such as Visions Unlimited; a group for older persons supervised by Southern's own Judy Stiles and Morris Sweet, MSTV provides satellite programming and educational television.

The station does not go unnoticed. In the National Association of College Broadcaster's first "Top Station Search," MSTV took first place in two categories: best programming, and overall station management. Contest directors noted that if there had been an award for station of the year, MSTV would have been awarded that honor as well.

In the near future, the college will also be providing ITFS, (Instructional Television Fixed Services), which will allow televised college level courses to be taken at area high schools. In addition, teleconferences via satellite will offer specialized seminars for those who need to be aware of updates, changes, and happenings.

Under the umbrella of the department of communications KXMS and MSTV operate on a budget from department appropriations.  Michele Jansen

COLD HARD CASH

Getting what we need

BOOKSTORE

Norton Sampler one of the most important artifacts to a budding English major, a bag of M & M's, and the dreaded two words striking fear to all hearts and bringing tears and sweat to eyes and flesh, the infamous blue book are all distinctly different, but have one thing in common, location. They can be found along with equally important merchandise at the Missouri Southern Bookstore.

Director Charles Moss says that the store has many items that are suited to most of the demanding needs of Southern students.

"Primarily we supply books and classroom supplies," said Moss. In addition T-shirts splashed with Southern logos and a few gift items on the side are available.

Moss enjoys his work in the store. He feels by keeping everything right with books on the respective shelves and seeing that students receive what they need, he makes a difference. ♻️

FINANCIAL AID

Photos by Sharon Weber

A department hidden in the basement of a building and, possesses over $9 million in cold, hard cash. Curious? The mafia?

Southern's Financial Aid Department is the distributor of over $9 million and, according to James Gilbert, director of student financial aid, almost all of it goes straight to the Missouri Southern student.

"We process financial aid to the students and we try to go out and find even more money to help the students go to school; in the forms of gift-aid and loans. In that regard we have been very, very successful, said Gilbert. "Nine million dollars! It can speak for itself. This money goes to over five hundred students during a twelve month period, and they use it for tuition fees, room and board, and off-campus living," Gilbert said.

The financial aid office at Southern runs very, very smoothly and is recognized as one of the best financial aid organizations in the country!

According to Gilbert, Southern has one of the leading financial aid offices in the United States. They utilize a computerized electronic data transfer system to electronically receive information. Only thirty-five schools use this complicated system. As for PC to PC mode, Southern is the only school using this system. Gilbert developed a line of computer software with some national processors. "In the last year we have done pilot studies for the state of Missouri. This has been opened not only to all schools in Missouri but will also branch outward to thirty-seven other states," said Gilbert.

The vote is in and it looks like the financial aid office at Southern will receive an A in all courses. ♻️

WARM SOFT HEARTS

Keeping what we have

Sweat pouring from damp scalp, hands trembling, grasping that all important sheet of crumbling computer paper, glancing mechanically at the watch on your wrist and at the line of people in front of you and growing behind you, pondering over and over again at the revelation that it is too late and all the classes are closed, never to be opened to the light of day until next semester, another world. You gnash teeth in anxiety as you watch the computer screen, studying the process of seeing your semester classes being entered into computer banks until finally you release the breath that you have been holding for a decade when your classes are cleared. This time, you were not late.

For many students this cycle occurs twice a year as they make their bi-annual trek to the Hearn Hall counseling center. Registration is just a small function of a wide, multi-role organization. Though counseling the student's wide range of problems and conflicts is the center's main task, they also complete a number of other equally important jobs. Jobs such as academic advisement, career counseling, and personal counseling, advising of international student advisors, coordinating handicapped services and the counseling of veteran's affairs. Dr Earle Doman, director of counseling, feels this is very rewarding.

"There are a lot of rewards gained from the position of helping people by trying to face their problems together and steering them toward the direction of understanding and ways of overcoming the problem," said Doman. "It is very rewarding in seeing that understanding of solving that problem." ♻️

ADMISSIONS

Trying to maintain accurate records of the student's academic processes at Southern is a "definition" of what the Registrar strives to accomplish each day. According to Dr. Eugene Mouser, maintaining records is only one of the many tasks his office performs on a daily basis.

"We have many jobs to tackle despite keeping accurate records," said Mouser. "For instance, we have students who have loans and in order to defer their payments somebody has to certify their credibility and see if they are actually enrolled at the school."

The registrar's office must verify the records of students who take advantage of insurance cost breaks for good grades. This information is collected from faculty, certified and given to the insurance companies.

Registrar's office also sends and receives transcripts. Each school uses a different numbering system, and Mouser said that in order to give credit where credit is due each system must be evaluated. ♻️

COUNSELING

Richard Humphrey, director of admissions, states that the important concept known as the "campus visit", undertaken this year has really paid off for prospective students and the college.

"Our goal used to be around one hundred or so visits a year and now that number is up to eight hundred," said Humphrey. "The necessity to cooperate and to work out the program with other faculty in different departments has been a massive undertaking. We're constantly on the hunt to find solutions to the problems and to then apply them so the students and parents will have the best here at Southern."

Humphrey has many ties to Southern beginning with his father who was on the admissions staff in 1937. He believes that having ties to Southern gives him that personal touch which enables him to sell Southern to those who visit. ♻️

DECISIONS

Dressing for success

One goal for attending Missouri Southern is to grab that elusive job and to make something of one's life - TO GET DIRTY RICH! Yet, as Nancy Disharoon says, the interview for a position can be very important, and what a person WEARS to that particular interview can spell life or death, Santa Barbara or Skid Row, thrill of victory or the agony of utter defeat.

"First impressions are very vital," said Disharoon. "I have had numerous employees tell me that they know within a minute of meeting someone whether or not they would seriously consider that person for the job. Research has proven that ninety-three percent of first impressions are visual and what you say, act and do gobble up the remaining meager seven percent."

Because the visual aspect is so treacherously important there are rules for both men and women to follow when it comes to the dressing and grooming for THAT interview.

"For that professional look, the man should most likely wear a wool fabric two piece suit in colors of blue or charcoal gray with a starched white one hundred percent cotton shirt underneath," said Disharoon. The tie should always cover the belt buckle, socks should cloak the calves, pocket handkerchief matching the tie, hair should be short and well-styled, clean shaven, manicured hands, a watch and ring at most in the jewelry category and no cologne. You will never know what your employer is allergic too!" While the man's accommodations seem rather drab and boring a woman can get away with a little more flash and dash.

"There are not as many rules in style and color for women as there are for men," said Disharoon. "The woman should wear a tailored suit, a dress if no suit is available, but must stay away from lace, ruffles, low cut neck-lines and short skirts. Jewelry should be held at the minimal, perhaps a ring or a string of pearls, but not the huge earrings that hang down to the shoulder because distractions should be avoided. Use neutral color hose - keep skirt below the knee - polished heels and shoes and dusting powder. A conservative hair-style has to be a must, Disharoon insists.

"Conservative is the key. You must stay conservative and you must go as high quality as you can within your budget without spending a fortune."

FROM TWO

Oh. To be young again

A typical day for Nakota Adams starts quietly.

She takes a step back from the circle of two year olds and looks the situation over. When she decides the time is right she attaches herself to teacher Debbie Starks, literally .

Nakota is a very intelligent child who just happens to be the youngest student enrolled at Missouri Southern. She began her college career a few days after her second birthday. Nakota is enrolled in the Child Development Center on campus.

Throughout the fall semester Nakota took stock of her peers and with typical first semester reaction decided that maybe just maybe this thing called college life might not be so bad.

Over Christmas break the metamorphosis of Nakota Adams began. The second semester student that emerged began to portray the first sign of her personality traits that she would use as wings to soar among the heavens.

Accepting her peers, Nakota, the first semester shy quiet child began to interact in the second semester. Joining group time, play time and becoming a very verbal student to express herself, Nakota began to test her wings.

Nakota enjoys working one on one with adults in the classroom setting which, according to her teacher, Starks, is typical of two -year -olds. She enjoys work time and playing in the ever popular house area. Nakota has a good start on her education that is stress free and fun and an education that will not clip her wings before she soars to new heights. ♻️

Special opportunities never end

Chris Schacht enrolled at Southern as an 18 - year-old freshman from St. Louis recruited to play soccer. His college days began before the fall semester started with practice twice a day for a week. Once the semester began, the practice continued for two hours daily except on game day.

But soccer is not the only reason Chris is at Southern. With several colleges checking out his talent and ability, Southern won because of its size and School of Business. He is a business major, and he liked what he saw at Southern. Chris thought he would feel more at home here and less lost than at a larger school.

Chris was named rookie of the year and of course is very proud of this but what makes him most proud is his mother and father, Bill and Carol.

His parents drive 274 miles from their home to Southern to watch him play. His father is retired so made it to almost all the games; Little Rock, Arkansas, was the furthest he drove. Chris is very proud of his parents and their support of him. You could see it in his eyes when he announced that they were #1 fans for the year and received t-shirts. Along with attending his games, when the team played in St. Louis, Chris's hometown, the team was treated to a barbecue.

Chris Schacht is a typical freshman in that he was 18 when he began his college day but with his talent and abilities, who he is and where he comes from, he is a most atypical freshman. ♻️

George White is a Southern student enrolled in the 60-Plus program. He is at the other end of the age spectrum and a much valued student. After helping his six children obtain a college degree George felt the time was right for him to receive his. His children are very supportive and motivate him to succeed. George wanted to return to school to better prepare himself to help young people. He is a tutor for anyone who needs him.

George helps prepare high school students for college. He proudly states that his past "students" are all enrolled in colleges across the United States.

He, as a student, is very selective about the courses he chooses. His choices are made with his "students" needs in mind. During the fall semester at Southern George was an English tutor. George is a special person in a special program helping others to become special in their own special way. ♻️

EDUCATION GOES ON

You are never too old

Setting up a new tele-conference system in local towns and handling, as usual, all of campus courses has kept continuing education quite busy during the year. Dr. Jerry Williams, continuing education director, is excited that the tele-conference system, which brought him to Missouri Southern, is finally getting off the ground.

"The biggest thing Continuing Education is doing now is the building and directing of two microwave receiver towers," said Williams. One located in Monett and the other inside Lamar. We will begin broadcasting live courses taking place on the Southern campus to these two sites. We can take down programs from other areas in the United States by satellite at Missouri Southern Television, put it on the microwave system and beam it out to Lamar and Monett. Thus giving outlying areas the benefits of tele-conference."

"It is very rewarding to see the ITFS system running because it has been one of the goals and one of my personal projects, that attracted and convinced me to come here," said Williams.

Amid the new sits proudly the old and continuing education has not neglected its main task.

"We handle all off-campus courses and we run about twenty-five regular college courses that are off-campus. Plus we run non-credit classes here on campus and put on workshops and seminars. We administer anything not on the normal college schedule," said Williams.

As for the future, Williams sees a great expansion of off-campus courses.

"I think the off-campus courses are expanding, as is the offerings of continuing education credit for different associations. More and more different professors are being required by their associations and licensing agencies to continue their education. This will be a continuously growing area," Williams said. ☼

ELDERHOSTEL

Learning at its best

Elderhostel, a vocational learning experience for people over the age of sixty, is a program offered by Missouri Southern. Its origin, the youth hostels of Europe, are in places such as the Great Barrier Reef, Lucknow, Strasbourg, Berlin and now Joplin. This program, designed for the mature adult wishing to expand educational horizons, offers a varied array of courses as well as a taste of campus living.

Missouri Southern has participated for three years and attracted teachers, engineers, a nurse, secretaries, and a retired military man the Summer of 1990.

Of those in attendance, many were experiencing their first Elderhostel, while others have been at Elderhostel three to sixteen times.

"Everyone was most helpful," commented Frances Gascon. "This is my first Elderhostel, but it has been such a pleasant experience that there certainly will be more."

East and West coasts were represented from Daytona, Florida to Riverside, California, the midwest by Iowa, Illinois, Ohio and Oregon.

Statements from those attending Elderhostel at Southern indicated that the campus was even more than they had hoped to find.

"I would rate the program very high on my list," said Mr. and Mr. Zwicker. "This is a very clean and attractive campus with courteous and pleasant employees."

The faculty and staff were highly praised for their help in making everyone feel at home.

"The classes and the professors were outstanding," said Mr. and Mrs. B. Zellers.

"Very impressed," remarked Christa Hallett.

Courses included instructions on computers, Civil War in the Ozarks, and memoir writing. Civil War in the Ozarks seems to draw the biggest enrollment.

The Elderhostel program is designed to meet the needs of the mature citizen and to use the resources of the communities that surround the local colleges and universities.

Participants use the college facilities, attend functions, and tour local attractions during their stay. George Washington Carver Memorial, Pea Ridge National Military Park, Precious Moments Chapel and Tri-State Mineral Museum were visited by the Elderhostel group.

The Elderhostel program at Southern is one small part of a world wide international Elderhostel organization. The Institute concept, developed by mature adults in the 60 plus category for their peers, will put Southern's Elderhostel program in touch with schools such as Dartmouth and the University of Michigan.

"Presently, we are the only school in Missouri affiliated with the Elderhostel program," said Dr. R. Jerry Williams, director of continuing education. "We are charting a new course with this program."  Rae LeNickols

WOMEN'S ATHLETICS

It is really going places

It all began sixteen, long years ago. A group of eager, young women, a court, and a basketball; a smashing success and a very bright future. What was an idea, is now a sprawling women's athletic department...an organization with "sprawling" responsibilities.

"We deal with about a hundred female athletes," said Sally Beard, director and head of the women's athletic program. "We offer competitive teams in all forms of the sports realm; volleyball, basketball, softball and track and we also compete under the MIAA."

"We started in 1974, and the first sport was basketball, and I coached it...and had a very good year," commented Beard. "This began when a group of girls asked me to start up a basketball program, during a time when only boys played the sport, and I said yes to the idea and a year later that idea became a reality for Southern."

Women's softball and tennis teams were also introduced that year and after a tentative gymnasium schedule was worked out, we were on our way.

"Southern has always competed well in conference standings," said Beard. We took second in 1982 in the sport of basketball and made it into the finals in softball four, different times. Southern's women have been very competitive, and usually finish in the top half of the sports in regard to the conference standings.

"Probably the most immediate goal is to get a full, track team," Beard said. This is our second year in cross country, and it is growing and improving. It is a part of a three year phase. Next year, we hope to be able to field a complete track and field team, and it takes a year or two to accomplish that. We shall take a good, hard look at the team and hopefully we will see some growth in that direction."

Beard would like to see many goals accomplished in the future but the most important goal centers upon the Southern track team.

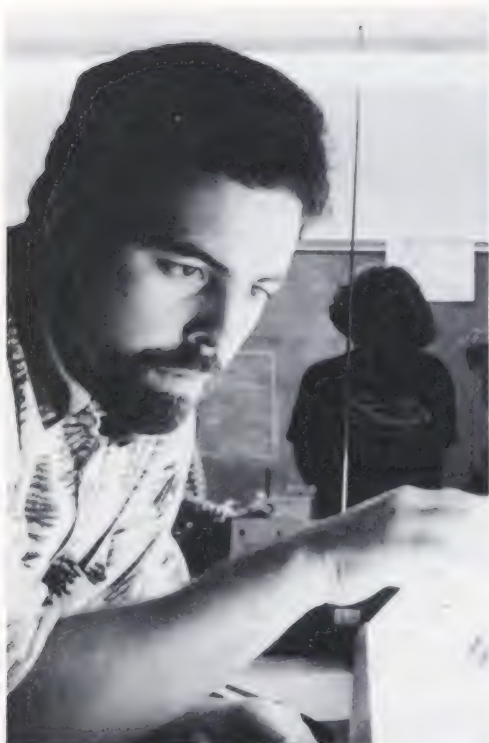

Basking in the glow of its great history, Beard has confidence that the Southern women's athletic program will continue in the art of winning and conquering...leading all others.

"I think women's athletics has a good history and has had a tradition of winning. We are representing the college very well, and I think we will continue doing that." ♻️

GRAPHICS

Designing the 90's

Consistency and practical, saleable skills are the goal of the graphic arts department. David Noblett is in his second year as full-time instructor in graphic communication.

Coming to Missouri Southern after five years at Eastern New Mexico State University, and twelve years as head designer for 3-M, Noblett describes himself not as a professional teacher, but as a representative of the business community. Keeping practicality in mind, Noblett strives to provide a consistency in the graphics program that was not possible in previous years with only part-time instructors.

Visual communication is the job of a graphics artist. By taking an idea and presenting it visually to inform, educate, persuade, promote or entertain based on research and methods of design, the work is varied and never static. Ranging from print ads, packaging, displays and signs to the overall look of videos and films, the graphics art package may include everything from logos and business cards to print ads and videos. This multi-disciplinary field has many specialists and few generalists due to the great variety of areas covered. The graphics artist goes beyond a pretty picture to one with motive and purpose. As an applied, rather than a fine artist, the graphic artist begins a project with product research market analysis and then works to form a program that is appealing to the targeted population.

The basis techniques are often learned by doing handdrawing. Once these techniques are mastered, modern technology allows tools such as computers, videos, photographs, and animation to be utilized and allow faster completion of many projects. Southern's graphic design students may not receive as much theory as students at other institutions, but Noblett's students leave Southern ready to do business. With 98% of his past graduates working in the graphic arts field, Noblett feels that staying in touch with business and keeping track of what businesses need lends success to a program. ♻️

CAMPUS ART

Artists bringing it alive

Continuum set amid change marked the 1990-91 Missouri Southern Art Department's year. According to Val Christensen, director of Southern's Spiva Art Center, a big change has been sandwiched between new exhibitions that spice each Southern year and traditional festivities that make up the goals outlined at the beginning of the school year.

"The big change that has occurred is the shift in the art department. Robert Scheweiger has come in as head of the department and I've moved away from that into the position of the director of the Spiva Art Center," said Christensen. "Amid that big change, we've been sponsoring the Art League, which has taken trips to Kansas City and Chicago, and also the traditional programs. Southern Showcase, for instance, the continuum of the Fine Arts Festival, and many exhibitions...from Robert Powell black artist's show to the Spiva Annual and the Gulf State Paper Corporation collection. We're also hoping to increase the participation of students campus-wide."

"Our stated goals are to provide an opportunity for the public to come in contact with original works of art, leading to greater understanding and appreciation, and then in relationship with them there is a variety of different activities: lecture, workshops, and published material, like calendars and catalogues."

Christensen believes the reaching out to and touching of the community is the best thing the art department can offer. "There is a tremendous interest in the contact with the community and extending beyond the traditional perimeter of the college community," Christensen said.  Kevin Mc Clintock

MUSIC

A language for all

Cooperation among faculty and students helps to maintain the Missouri Southern music department. According to Myung Hee Chung, Southern's piano instructor, when cooperation is running at full speed, relationships are at their peak." Here at Southern, we are not giving them the luxury of a huge, cavernous hall that seats three hundred students equipped with a microphone, but instead, our studio lessons are one-on-one. Thus, the outcome is a wonderful working relationship between student and teacher and also between teacher and teacher.

"Cooperation is the key, and we at the music department are very, very cooperative."

Chung says that her fourteen pupils will be teachers of piano, and that they must always reach higher and higher every day to achieve their specified goals. "Our students are not going to be concert musicians; instead, they will become teachers...certified teachers, but in order to be good teachers, you have to know your instrument, or your major field, and that really inspires students to reach higher and higher to achieve their goals. I am trying to achieve for them the various repertoire from different styles. We usually teach about four centuries of piano music and students must understand the difference in each period and the difference between composers of that period. And in order to do that, they must achieve better technique. Technique applies not only to the elasticity of the fingers, but also applies to good grades and how to derive good sounds from the piano, because sometimes, even though it is the same instrument, two people can make very different sounds. This is my goal for my students to understand, achieve, and utilize."

Chung believes Southern's atmosphere and size are better suited to her students than a larger university.

"This is not an extremely huge school, but rather a small school, so we know all of the teachers and faculty within the music department. Since we know music majors by their names, we are in a better position to help them, academically and personally, if a problem should arise. I just love working here, doing my job." ♻️ Kevin McClintock

INITIATING ACTION

Catch the craze

Friday, December 22, 1989, Missouri Southern State College instituted its paper recycling program. This program began well in advance of the mandate time issued from Governor Ashcroft's office which requested state agencies to become more environmentally concerned.

"We recycle because it was mandated by the governor and as Southern is a member of the community we feel this obligation is our responsibility to the community," said Bill Boyer, director of safety and security.

High paper waste areas received cardboard containers to hold recyclable paper for collection. When removed by the midnight security personnel the paper is taken to the storage area for removal by Multi-Use Systems Inc. of Joplin. The storage area contains four twenty-bushel canvas baskets and are removed and replaced by Multi-Use Systems Inc. of Joplin as they become full, which is approximately every three weeks.

Personnel at other colleges have contacted Boyer for information on the initial start-up and continuation of this program for use at their facility. Since Southern's program was started before the mandate time, the bugs have been worked out of the system and a finished product can be shared with other colleges.

The money received from this program is placed in the general fund, according to Sidney Shouse, assistant vice president of business affairs; payment is made to the college every six months with the amount depending upon correct collection procedures. But the bottom line still remains environmental and not financial.

"This is strictly an environmental issue mandated to the college and was not entered into as a profitable venture," said Boyer.

In addition, did you know? Would you have guessed? Could you ever imagine? Recycled just can't look this good. Is the yearbook you are holding printed on old class notes? tuition statements? first drafts of that killer research paper? disregarded love letters?

YES? NO? MAYBE? The 1990-91 Crossroads staff decided to take part in recycling by printing this book on RECYCLED paper.

CAMPUS CLEAN-UP

Recycling students

Missouri Southern's mission to make a world of difference is recycling through to students, as well as faculty and staff. Southern students are aware that to make a difference, involvement must occur. Involvement is occurring on campus environmentally and socially by students who are taking advantage of programs offered by Southern that hopefully will bring about a much needed change.

A program students are taking advantage of is the aluminum pop can recycling program. Yellow torpedo shaped receptacles are placed next to sixteen pop machines on campus for aluminum pop can disposal. Receptacles are also located in the lobbies of the residence halls for added involvement.

"A lot of times, I'll see people get Cokes from the lobby and watch TV until the Coke's gone," said freshman Iana Danley. "Then they'll put the empty can in the 'recyclable cans only' waste basket and get another Coke."

Aluminum cans are picked up when the receptacles become full. Approximately every three weeks cans are taken to the Joplin Sheltered Workshop and sold at the current market value.

Students, such as freshman Bridget Stroup, appear to be taking home aluminum cans instead of soiled clothing. "I save all the cans I can get a hold of," said Stroup. "Then I take them back home. My brother and I combine our cans and take them to the center."

Recycling cans is not the only thing that people are doing to improve conditions. Freshman Jami Bruton not only recycles cans but also uses non-aerosol products. She's concerned for the environment and does what she can but is more concerned about the world socially.

"I want to be a speech and debate coach because my coach had a great effect on me morally, said Burton. "I want to do the same thing for tomorrow's kids."

Recycling, helps create a better environment and a better society. Southern students are making a world of difference by recycling. ♻️ Lezli Brown

CAMPUS LIFE SUPPORT

Working to keep it alive

I magine the Missouri Southern campus as being a living, breathing entity. The Board of Regents, president, vice presidents, deans and heads of assorted departments comprise the complicated parts of the brain. Instructors and staff represent the nervous system that dot this sprawling form, connecting all sections to the brain. Internal organs are the tall buildings, and the rushing, energetic blood is the thousands of academically starved students who inch their way across the cement-paved veins every single day.

Whether it be this make believe body or our beautiful campus, there need to be bones to harden it and a backbone to strengthen it...and that is where the physical plant department enters the picture. But what does the physical plant department do? According to Bob Beeler, director, more than most people think.

"Most of the students, when they see or hear our name dredge up images of the security personnel," said Beeler. "But there are 54 of us, with a wide variety of positions: custodians and carpenters who keep the buildings and classrooms clean, painters and mechanical maintenance, clerical, and the grounds crew. Each of these is a small piece that links up to form a complete puzzle."

Actually, the physical plant department is divided up into two, distinct sections: maintenance on one side; campus safety and security on the other.

"The role of maintenance is to help," said Beeler, who came to Missouri Southern from the University of Arkansas a year ago. "When a teacher enters a classroom, his or her only concern should be teaching, and when a student enters that same room, his or her mind should only focus on getting an education. The room's temperature, for instance, or the cleanliness of a room should never be in their minds. It should all be taken for granted that these things will be in order. When this happens, we know we are doing our job correctly.

"I see the role of security on Southern's campus becoming more significant with the way campus crime is increasing throughout the country," said Beeler. "We are beginning crime prevention activities, solving crimes as fast as we can, passing out publications to the student body. This will make the students understand better the ways in which to protect themselves or their possessions from being harmed or stolen, for instance, protecting their dorm rooms or automobiles. I look for real growth in that department."

"The low rate of crime has been our number one achievement and our number one goal," he said. "But, we are not going to achieve that for next year by sitting back on our laurels. We are going to keep working at it." The jobs are not always easy to accomplish and the list is never-ending, but Beeler is confident that his crew will meet and surpass the needs of Southern.

▣ Keeping the campus grounds clean and uncluttered is part of Al Wood's job.

▣ Occasionally the maintenance department is up in the air.

So, the dedicated and devoted warriors of the physical plant will keep on entering the daily battle of mud-smeared, gum-caked rooms, grimy floors, ripped carpeting, chipped paint, car fenders wrapped around trees, yellow weeds sticking out amid the green, swaying grass, and bathroom graffiti that life keeps throwing at them.

"We do an amazing amount of work with the number of staff that we have here. I feel like I can speak with some confidence because I came from a place with over a hundred craftsmen, and that was not including custodians, so I know for a fact that we do an excellent job with so few employees.

"But of course, the job is not easy, and we are always swamped with work. Sometimes, most of the time, it is Hill Street Blues around here," concluded Beeler. ♻️ Kevin McClintock

Law Enforcement

Protecting our privileges

Justice through education is a goal of the criminal justice department. A goal that they strive to reach daily through standard courses, seminars and hands on investigations. The criminal justice department is probably one of the most unusual departments on campus.

"We are unique in that we are a college program with a two or four year degree, we are the Regional Police Academy, the Regional Crime Lab and we house the Emergency Medical Services training (EMS)," said Spurlin. EMS is offered through Southern's curriculum.

Every faculty member in Missouri Southern's program was at one time in law enforcement, before returning to the classroom to make a difference in their field.

"We have over 50 years combined in law enforcement," said Jack Spurlin, director of criminal justice. "Students can work the day to day basics with people experienced in their field."

There are diverse career opportunities for criminal justice graduates. Most students go straight to work after graduation Spurlin said.

Criminal justice graduates become police officers, probation and parole officers, and juvenile officers.

Others enter the area of the Missouri State Highway patrol, Sheriff's department, Federal Bureau of Corrections, the Secret Service, Drug Enforcement Agency (DEA) or the private sector in loss prevention.

Those students electing to continue their education in a graduate school program generally enter into the law field. Former criminal justice from Southern graduates now hold positions such as federal judge, prosecuting attorney, and assistant prosecuting attorney.

Criminal justice graduates also enter the Department of Family Services and Department of Youth Services through the state of Missouri.

Spurlin said criminal justice majors with a two or four year degree will generally receive salaries compatible to salaries received in teaching. ♻️

CAD-CAM

Technology

Building the future

Providing a leading edge in education to students, representing the college and creating an international image are goals of instructors Fran Bartholet and Don Schultz. Bartholet, computer aided drafting (CAD) instructor, and Schultz, computer aided manufacturing instructor (CAM), strive to develop technology for their students and the community.

Schultz, won the prestigious Images Award for his carving of the Missouri Southern State College Lion's head in last year's competition. At the Maryland competition, hosted by the Society of Manufacturing Engineers, the CAD/CAM department received third in the nation. The preceding year the department captured second place honors in Detroit, Michigan. This year's competition involves designing a robot and programming it to run through a maze. "We're going back this year and we're going to win first," said Schultz. Students in the CAD/CAM department raise the funds to travel to the competitions by selling their own work, this year's items, clocks with the Lion's head inset and a 3-D reproduction of da Vinci's "The Last Supper".

Attending competitions is only part of it. Each year Southern hosts an Industrial Arts Fair for area high schools in which entrants have their creations judged by Southern students. High school students this year were asked to create their own robots and compete against each other for the opportunity to attend the competition in Detroit with the CAD/CAM department.

The student chapter of the Society of Manufacturing Engineers, the campus organization for CAD/CAM majors, tours local businesses to become familiar with the different systems in use in this area. Southern's program uses a machine identical to the one used at Leggett & Platt.

"Around 70 percent of my night program consists of Leggett & Platt engineers who come here to Southern for retraining; or people who plan to work for them after graduation," said Schultz. "Things are changing so quickly—I have some students who have their two-year degree who are going to work in manufacturing engineering areas that used to require a four-year degree"

Much of the work done by companies that made the finished product possible was done manually, but now, in the computer age of today, it is almost untouched by human hands. With things changing so rapidly, many two-year students are asked to teach their new boss how to work the new applications.

Southern, is as always, taking the lead in initiating the changes that it takes to be the best. Perhaps the most impressive move made in CAD/CAM was the integration of the two departments to form Computer Integrated Manufacturing (CIM), enabling manufacturers to create projects directly from the CAD design.

Being leaders of innovation, Bartholet and Schultz continue to look beyond the present. What does the future hold for CIM? Possibly the integration of CIM with marketing and management, accounting, sales, and shipping, an integration of the entire system.

The CAD/CAM program at Southern is different than yesteryear, yesterday; so stop and take a good look; tomorrow it will be different. After all, great leaders will change to meet the demands of the future. ☼ Marla LePage

LEADERSHIP MATERIAL

The making of an officer

The Persian Gulf crisis has been in the news night and day in the 1990-91 school year. There is probably not a campus in the United States that has not been affected. One reason for this is that the Reserved Army Officers' Corps offers students many ways to help finance college.

Attending Southern on the ROTC program are four men who may be called to duty in the Persian Gulf. These four men are members of a United States Army Reserve unit off campus in the 1010 Supply and Service Company in Pittsburg, Kansas.

The men, Cadet M.S. III Timothy S. Enlow, Cadet E-4 John Wimberley, Cadet M.S. III Corporal James R. Emmert, and Cadet E-5 Darren DeCuir are all full time students.

Major R. Dunn, commanding officer at Southern, said, "If their unit is mobilized and they are military occupation speciality qualified, then they will deploy with their unit."

As full-time students, the reservists will be placed on a leave of absence by the ROTC program at Southern. The cadets may withdraw from classes receive a full refund, or an incomplete grade may be given and work may be finished after their tour is complete.

Part of the instruction in the fall of 1990 took on a new emphasis. The men were instructed in the religion and culture of the Persian Gulf region. They received training in how to survive in desert conditions and how to acquire the right frame of mind for survival. Their instruction also covered the personal life of the cadet soldier.

"Last drill, the entire drill we spent updating personal records." This is called POM (preparation for overseas movement) and means that the men in the 1010 S & S company were updating immunizations, checking to see if their records were correct, deciding upon power of attorney, and updating life insurance," DeCuir said. "They're (1010 Company) still on ready status and believe they will be called up."

In the Army or any branch of the American service for that matter is a unique term - "Point of Contact". This is a lifeline for the men and women who are serving in Desert Storm. The contact, usually in the service, volunteers to keep close watch over the enlisted soldier's family. He assists the family in dealing with the Military and becomes a liaison for communication between the soldier and the family. He is someone who cares very much what happens to the men and women in his command and is the support force that helps create group meetings for loved ones at home, and helps give peace of mind to the family.

Major Dunn will send his four men off to the desert if they are called up, but he does not have to sever the lifeline he has been in their past and the lifeline he has volunteered to be in their future. ♻️

When or if you ever need to visit the Archives department at Southern, don't look for dust and don't try to smell the mold because you won't find it and you won't smell it.

Charles Nodler, director of Archives, says the purpose of an Archives department is "to preserve information and to make available that information to the public. Archives should be kept in good condition because they are rare and valuable books, maps and documents."

Envision if you will, aisle upon aisle of books, box upon box of congressional papers, and drawer upon drawer of one-hundred-year-old maps, all of these cataloged, entered into computer and printed into guides for easy access and usage.

Included are rare and valuable books given by Arrell Gibson, noted historian, so that the past may live on for the future. Gibson was selected an outstanding alumnus of Southern; he also was a nominee for the Pulitzer Prize. He was a well known author of national and international history and a man who never forgot his beginnings at Joplin Junior College.

Also, there are the Fred G. Hughes papers that contain detailed information of the transition from a two-year junior college to a four year institution of higher education.

Congressional papers from sixteen years of public service were given by Gene Taylor. Included are sixteen years of correspondence and legislative proceedings that tell the story of the man in the public's eye.

Over one thousand maps in the Tri State Mining collection cover one hundred years of mining in the surrounding area. These include maps used by consulting firms, real estate companies, environmental organizations, and property owners. Washington D.C., Denver, Knoxville, and Great Britain all share at least one information source. At one time or another, people in these locations have contacted Nodler in the Archives department and asked for help in finding that one piece of elusive information needed to complete or legitimize a document.

"The people in Washington D.C. and Texas telephoned, told me what they wanted, I made photo copies and mailed them to them," said Nodler.

An inquiry from Great Britain came by mail with the information needed being quickly returned. No inquiry is turned down or forgotten by the Archives department; if the information is not available, a source will be located by the department.

If Nodler is asked by a co-worker what his department is doing to further the Mission of Southern, he can answer—the same as before: Preserving information that is provided for use nationally and internationally to all who ask. ♻️

WORDS OF WISDOM

Finding the knowledge

The library is the center of learning. From books, we learn knowledge. From knowledge, we can make a difference.

Spiva Library strives daily to make the learning easier. High technology facilitates this process.

The LION, can be used from any computer on campus to access circulation and publication availabilities at Spiva.

"It works great for the students," said Charles Kemp, head librarian. "You can be anywhere on campus where there is a terminal. It's our dream to have periodicals on line, also." Spiva can boast about having the Compact Disc Read Only Memory System, CD ROM for short. "We are in a fairly select group by having this system," Kemp said. "It is the largest periodical and reference guide."

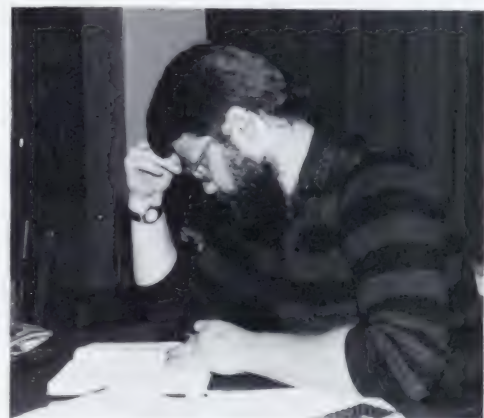

The Northwest Association continually has given high marks to the Spiva Library for its facilities. Inter-library loans are quick and easy with the OCLC database system. "OCLC has over 20 million records in 2000 libraries," said Kemp. "If a student is in a hurry, loans can even be sent through a fax machine in a matter of minutes." Spiva Library has the personal touch also. "We have a professional staff with librarians on duty Monday through Friday," said Robert Black, reference librarian. "Our staff members try to help students feel comfortable with the technology that's available to them."

Keeping up with the changing technology is an expensive task. "We constantly need more money for databases not available," said Kemp. "We would feel very fortunate to be able to expand on what we already have."

The library is always looking to expand the possibilities for students and faculty. The Spiva employees want to make a difference in the quest for knowledge. ♻️

ORGANIZATIONS

When people leave home, traveling toward college and the reality of their dream, they leave behind what has been their lifeline and a major source of emotional, mental, and physical support --families and friends.

Southern provides its student body with organizations that involve the honor student, the social student, the professional student and every student in between. All organizations are sponsored by concerned faculty advisers.

ACADEMICS

Some organizations are geared toward academic endeavors and many, in fact, are sponsored by the department offering a specific discipline of study. This is a good way to meet friends who have similar interests, share some good times, and build lasting friendships. Being involved in clubs and activities can make a college career more fulfilling. These organizations do much for the student. They seek out guest speakers, show films, offer awareness events, and sponsor career days.

Although academic in focus, these organizations are active in campus social life. They build floats, make displays and nominate royalty during Homecoming Week. ♻️

The goals of the Social Science Club are aimed at the cultivation of interest, knowledge and participation of social science majors. As a result of these goals, combined with social interaction among the members, a cohesive organization has emerged.

The Social Science Club also provides a permanent student society that organizes and promotes the functions and extra-curricular activities that serve to enhance the social sciences department at Missouri Southern State College.

"The club is one of the main links to the discipline that they are studying," said Dr. David Tate, head of the social science department.

The club, organized in 1983, has approximately 20 members. This year, the members assisted the department with the Helen S. Boylan Foundation symposium in November and later with National History Day in March.

Visions Unlimited

Visions Unlimited began its career at Southern from an inquiry by the Area Agency on Aging. The agency contacted the college which proceeded to create a course to fit the needs of some very interesting and talented people.

Working together the departments of continuing education and communications designed a course to fill these needs.

The twenty members of Visions Unlimited found this course to be a challenge as all incoming members were new to the world of television production. A prerequisite, so to speak, must first be met, which was in this case an eight week television production course.

"My wife Kay and I enrolled in an eight week TV production class at Southern before we were allowed to touch the equipment," said Lud Penkauskas.

Much planning goes into each and every production. Crews receive experience in all areas of television production including both studio and field work. All visions members learn the skills to fulfill the assignments.

"We have a planning meeting and try to project tentative programs for a three month time frame," said Jo Shiner, group designated coordinator, "but mostly we have a good time."

"You find out how much time is involved in producing a thirty minute show," said Penkauskas. "It takes a lot of time to do it right."

Meeting interesting people from all walks of life is one of the best reasons to be a member Penkauskas said. ♻️

January 23, 1991 marked another milestone for Missouri Southern Television. On this day it was announced that Missouri Southern Television had won awards in the National Association of College Broadcasters (NCAB) first annual "Top Station Search". Missouri Southern Television took top honors in two of the three categories awarded.

Judy Stiles, community service director for Missouri Southern Television, said that with the entrance application supplemental materials were enclosed. These materials included sample programming tapes, the management operations manual and copies of letters from viewers of Missouri Southern Television.

Missouri Southern Television airs student and community productions covering a wide variety of topics while providing exposure for many organizations. Local programming includes area city council meetings, Southern sports activities, art programs, Academic Challenge for area High Schools and Newsmakers.

Newsmakers, produced and hosted by Stiles, for the second year has won an award in the news category for local programming in the Community Broadcasters Association Competition. ♻️

RELIGIOUS

Atending college often means traveling away from home and everything familiar; such as family, friends and church. Southern offers a wide range of organizations and activities to help students combat these losses. Religious organizations offer students a safe haven from the storm of campus life, a place to gather with peers, to praise their God and to do the tasks set before them. These organizations attempt to reinforce the values students bring with them to campus. Often this provides a home of faith never before experienced by students, and a learning experience.

MUSIC

Delighting an audience, assisting with music contests, socializing, and rubbing shoulders with the community's professional musicians motivate students to participate in a variety of music performance groups and pre-professional music organizations. Through music group involvement, students have opportunities to develop a network of friendships with others who share the same talents and interests. Collegiate musician's serve as ambassadors for the College. Students find that involvement in music develops skills that continue to bring quality to their lives for years and years to come.

HONORS

Each major or field of study students strive to excel to the highest degree attainable. They find assistance in this endeavor from organizations and national honor societies. Membership often requires maintaining a certain G.P.A., plus chapter and community involvement. Time and energy are expended by students to fulfill obligations to the society in addition to maintaining scholastic requirements. These societies offer recognition in their fields from professionals in the community, giving students an edge in the career race. The name of Southern's game: involvement. ♻️

INTEREST GROUPS

Calling the campus of Southern home are many groups and organizations that combine the social and academic life of the student. Interest groups from Art League to Rodeo Club, Environmental Health to the Model U.N., International Club to W.I.S.E provide a place and create a cause for each and every student on campus. Each interest group invests the time, energy and skill it takes to make a difference in what they believe in. These groups provide motivation to succeed, passion to promote a cause, involvement to see it started, and action to get it done. ♻️

International Club

Involvement is the key word to the success of the International Club. Every member becomes part of the club; whether it is just taking part in the monthly activities, or becoming an officer.

The main purpose of the International Club is "to give the international students a friend while they are away from home," said club president Rafael Santiago.

"We want to avoid the aloneness that some students feel," said Santiago.

Puerto Rico, Malaysia, Vietnam, Sweden, Italy, Pakistan, and Iran are just a few countries represented by the international student population at Southern. Since the club is an international experience, all nationalities are welcome to take part in the learning excitement of the group.

The growth and development of the club has given, "different nationalities the chance to live and do things together," said Santiago. The club discusses and plans activities every two weeks for the international students.

Earlier this year international students were assigned to a host families. The host families become the student's surrogate while they are away from home.

The International Club is here for all students who want to get involved and meet new, people. It's an opportunity to further education by meeting new people from around the globe.

Campus Activities Board

Amid the ringing phones, Val Carlisle, coordinator of Student Activities and director of Billingsly Student Center, helped a patron of the piano competition find that perfect seat for maximum enjoyment during a recital.

"The Student Center runs the ticket office but only in the afternoons and Carol, who is actually the building secretary, and I don't believe we should turn people away when they have made the trip to Southern to purchase tickets," Carlisle said.

CAB is probably best known for the movies they provide for students than for the other programs they provide.

"We decided to sacrifice quantity for quality," Carlisle said. "The movie 'Glory' was the most expensive movie shown and was chosen to be viewed on February 27th in special recognition of black history month."

CAB provides more than just movies. The organization is responsible for bringing to campus guest speakers such as Israeli born Samuel Kirshner who offered an international viewpoint on stress in America and Dave Marsh, writer for "Rolling Stone Magazine" who spoke on censorship.

CAB is one of the few organizations that appeals to any student. As student member Andy Love said "CAB has something for everyone." ♻️

GREEK

The Greek organizations on campus provide an active social life for students away from home and an opportunity to begin a lifelong contribution of community service. These services include: financial and volunteer work for Cerebral Palsy Foundation, Soul's Harbor Mission, March of Dimes, and many others. This year all Greeks par-

▲ participated in a food drive for the soldiers in the Middle East. Strong ideals for leadership, scholarship, and development of character are promoted within the Greek society. Kappa Alpha Kappa Alpha, it is more than a fraternity, it is a way of life. The brothers of KA pursue excellence in all things. The men of KA strive to develop characteristics such as those possessed by some of history's great men like Leon Jaworski, Richard E. Byrd, Dean Rusk, George C. Marshall, and George S. Patton. KA teaches young men to be leaders, to be brave and self-reliant, and to live with honor in their hearts.

KA aids in the development of young minds to reach their fullest potential. KA works to be an asset to its college community.

The philosophy of KA is that the acquisition of knowledge and the development of character are the great goals of life.

The KA Order is military in organization and government, religious in feeling and chivalrous in ideals. These ideals add grace to life, valor, loyalty, truthfulness, reverence for woman-kind, courtesy, modesty of bearing, self-denial and consideration and thoughtful regard for the feeling of others. ♻️

GOVERNMENT

Survey and polling results indicate that the college student of the '90s is not interested in government today. However, on the campus of Missouri Southern State College, students have multiple opportunities to share in "grassroots" government. Each student has the democratic right to cast a ballot for elected student senate representatives. Presidents of each campus organization belong to the Prexy Club. This group meets several times a year with college administrators. With this structure, student interests are represented formally. For students interested in national politics, both the Democrats and Republicans have campus organizations. ♻️

Student Senate

The Student Senate was organized in 1937 and represents the student body on faculty-student committees. The Senate promotes activities which stimulate scholarship on campus, and helps to initiate new programs that are beneficial to MSSC students.

Student Senate members are actively involved in the community as volunteers for such services as United Way fund raisers, MSSC Phonathon, and various student service functions.

"Student Senate is their (the students) voice on campus," said senior Mary Hanewinkel, Student Senate president. "Student Senate has the ability to help make changes on campus."

Some of the things they have accomplished include lengthening library hours, and having lights installed on the main campus area.

The Student Senate visits Jefferson City every spring to lobby for and promote MSSC to legislators. They also hosts a luncheon for members of the House of Representatives and the Senate.

Comprising the foundation for Coach Warren Turner's Lions Baseball pyramid of success are community organizations with which we are all familiar.

Children's Miracle Network, Salvation Army, Boys Club, Joplin Sheltered Workshop and Adopt-A-Highway are just a few of the organizations that at one time needed volunteers. A call for help went out. Coach Turner and the members of his team responded without hesitation. No job was ever too big or task too small for the men of Lions Baseball.

Community involvement by the baseball team began several years ago as a way to keep team members busy on weekends. Many team members were recruited from metropolitan areas where there is always something to do and someone to do it with.

Attending Missouri Southern in Joplin was quite a change for some of these guys so Coach Turner began his volunteer work program. Each year it becomes bigger and better for the team, Southern and the community.

"When I first came out here from New Jersey, Coach Turner was my only friend," said senior Dennis Burns. "However, because we are involved with so many team projects, I have met some of the most wonderful people who are now my life long friends."

The volunteer work, according to Turner, benefits his team in several ways.

"They (community) know your players from community involvement, so they come out to watch them play," said Turner. "We've had great teams in the past but we draw more (spectators) now through our community involvement."

The next level on the pyramid is academic progression and baseball development. This is the nitty gritty

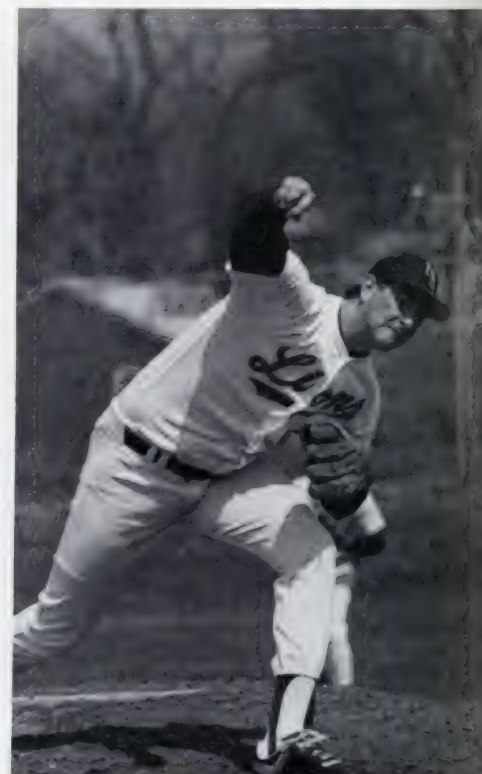

The United Way, Red Cross, of college for the members of the team. This is the level where they must maintain their grades and perform at their peak athletic ability.

In the 1990 season, the team was the MIAA South Division Champs and participated in the NCAA Division II South Central Regional play-offs.

Level three or the summit of the pyramid of success brings it all together for the team. Reaching the tip of the summit, the team members will acquire college degrees which is the ultimate goal they have been working toward. In reaching that goal they will have traveled to various play-offs and championships. The possibility exists for some members of the team to become professional players. This is a real possibility for the caliber of graduate that Southern and Coach Turner have helped to create.

To top their list of accomplishments, Missouri Southern Lady Lions became the first team at Southern, (men or women's) to earn NCAA ranking. They were the first varsity team to capture a Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association crown and the first to advance to NCAA post-season play.

The Lady Lions began post-season play by defeating the University of Missouri-Rolla to gain the MIAA conference title.

Five players were named to the first team of the MIAA conference squad: Jennifer Burken, Carrie Carter, Deanna Combs, Robin Hershback and Diane Miller. Miller was named most valuable player and first team pick as catcher. Lipira was chosen coach of the year in the conference.

The Lions moved on to the NCAA south regional quarterfinals in Fla. where they defeated Wayne State, Michigan and Florida Southern College for the title. Six Lady Lions were named the outstanding players of the tournament, first baseman Kim Pellow, third baseman Monica Fabro, shortstop Leslie Myers, outfielder Carrie Carter, and outfielder Tiffany Carter. Combs and Miller were selections to the NCAA Division II central-region team with Carter being second team selection. Pat Lipira was chosen coach of the year at regionals also.

Before moving on to nationals, Diane Miller was named to the second team of the NCAA Division II All-American team.

Arriving in Midland, MI, Southern was seeded fourth in the four team national tournament. The sixth ranked Lady Lions lost against top seeded and number one ranked Cal State and to number two ranked University of Pennsylvania. At the end of the tournament Jennifer Burkin, a senior designated hitter, was named to the final four All-American team. ♻️

TRACK

1 990 saw the beginnings of the indoor and outdoor track and field competition. Close to 40 athletes competed in the program. Coach Tom Rutledge said the number of athletes had grown quicker than he had anticipated and contributes this to the dedication, work ethics and success of the first participants in the program.

"Running is the base of all athletic competition," said Rutledge. This helps to make the transition easier from other sports to track and field. All the athletes that commit to competition in cross country and track should be commended due to the individual dedication and challenge it takes for this team sport. It is exciting to coach these athletes day after day, knowing that due to the diversity of the sport, each of them will have the opportunity to compete on game day. Nobody sits on the bench!"

Some of the events in track and field are distance running, high jump, long jump, triple jump, shot put, discus, sprinters and hurdlers. Athletes in the sport of track and field will spend two to three hours every day working out. Each event has its own workout regime including weight-lifting for strength building for discus and shotput, plyometrics for jump events, reaction time to the sound of the gun and basic technique for all events.

The future looks bright for Southern's young track and field program.

"I think our team is improving immensely especially for such a young team," said Jamie Burnham, assistant coach. "The future looks promising for the program with the entire team returning, so anyone we sign for next year will be icing on the cake." ♻️

Ten will try only five will succeed as the men of golf start head to head competition for team membership. At this time though Coach Bill Cox said it was just a little early to give specifics for the team. Choosing the best to be the team involves keeping stats on players during practices and games. This includes scores, birdies, bogies, ups and downs and par scores.

Recruitment is done strictly through the mail. Missouri Southern's golf program is definitely an international sport.

"I have received three letters from Canada and one from France from men wanting to come to Southern to play golf," said Cox.

The perspective team members are invited to Southern to see the campus and play a round of golf with Cox. This is the only recruitment program for golf.

The golf program at Southern has three golf courses for practice and play, Twin Hills, Loma Linda and Briarbrook.

Coach Cox devotes his time to teaching the science and the mechanics of golf to his students.

"I have been a student of golf for 45 years," said Cox. "My idol is Brian Nelson. Nelson was the man who got me interested in studying the golf swing."

The team helps out at the Art Watkins Tournament to raise funds for scholarships. The team has a good background and is fulfilling all expectations. ♻️

Recovering from a disappointing 4-13 season, the tennis team of Missouri Southern hopes to build from the foundation set down last year and to grow in strength and experience.

According to Bodine, head coach of the women's tennis team, the extensive practicing the team is currently tackling should help them in their task of having a good, productive season.

"We're hoping this practice, such as scrimmaging, drills, and every-day conditioning; will mentally prepare the players for the upcoming season. The real thing!" commented Bodine.

Though 21 games are scheduled for the Southern team in a relatively short eight week period, including four matches with the University of South Carolina, Bodin has confidence that her troops, led by Canadian-born Sarah Puhl...a transfer from Kansas, can turn things around in a bid way and set the program in the right direction.

"There are only nine competitors to contend with, four schools; Northwest Missouri State, Washburn, Lincoln and Northeast Missouri State...who are very tough, and would be a major upset if we can defeat them, I might add. Yet the other five teams are an equal to us, so there is no reason why we cannot play these five teams close, the other four teams tough, and come out with an improved record over last years," said Bodine.

VOLLEYBALL

Finishing sixth in the conference with an impressive 15-19 record, the Missouri Southern volleyball team can only improve from a heartening year dueling it out at the nets. The 1990

91 season can only be compared to a sandwich...the first and last layer of the bread being fresh and delicious...

"We started off pretty well in the first part of the season, but by mid-season we were slipping and sliding, and our inexperience showed due to key competition," said Debbie Traywick, head coach of the Lady Lions volleyball team. "But we jelled out after the fall losing streak and played extremely well, winning 10 out of our last 17 games."

Two juniors, a sophomore, and three freshmen, plus the addition of four new women to the roster, will play a key factor in the up-coming season.

"We have grown in strength, while our competition around us are losing seniors and vital experience," said Traywick. Central Missouri State, for instance. They are undoubtedly our toughest opponent, and have lost a major player, a former All-American. Other teams have been hit hard as well.

"This year we were in the middle of the pack, finishing sixth in the conference. Hopefully, utilizing the experience gained from this season, we can move up in the pack," said Traywick.

But with good things...come bad things.

"We have a very tough schedule for next year, a schedule ruled the toughest in the history of Southern, so we have to play that much tougher. I like things tough, and even if we do not win the conference we will be an overall better ball team," said Traywick.

Hitting the ball with all her might, Michelle Dixon # 12, gets it over the net.

LIONS BASKETBALL

Supporting a young squad amid top-ranked conference teams, the Missouri Southern Lion's basketball team have been able to chisel out yet another productive season. "We have three teams in the top nine-tenths of the conference and country. Southwest Baptist ranked second...Missouri Western fifth and we have two other teams in the Top 20, Missouri St. Louis and Southeast Missouri State, so it is a very tough and competitive conference." said head coach Robert Corn.

Currently at 10-11...5-6 in the conference, with less than a month to play, Corn feels that youth has led to the inconsistencies in this season.

"We are one game below .500 in the conference, so we are somewhat inconsistent this season but we are playing a lot of young players and it has taken us a while to get on track," said Corn. "The second half has been better, but unfortunately we are playing many games on the road and it has been very tough on all of us. One of our goals at the start of the season was to make the conference play-offs and that is still a realistic goal for us."

On the other hand Corn believes that the youth aspect can also benefit Southern in the seasons to follow.

"I feel like we have had a pretty realistic season considering how young the team is," said Corn. "A great thing about having youth is that we will have a lot of these players back next year so there will be a lot of carry over which is different from this year when we only had four players returning. We are definitely on the up-swing." ♻️

BASKETBALL

Ups and downs have highlighted the waning 1990-91 season of Missouri Southern's women's basketball team. "We started out 0-2 in the Cameron tournament...which was on the road and that was a tough weekend for us." Said Scott Ballard, new head coach of the Lady Lions. "For the first time we were playing together, and it was a completely new adjustment for myself and the players, and we lost both games and came back wondering if we're going to have any success, how good we were going to be, and what adjustments we were going to have to make."

All of the answers to these questions were answered when the Lions packed it up and flew south to the Lone Star state.

"We won four games in a row, and the biggest win was the victory against Texas University," said Ballard. "Because we were a huge underdog and were down by 13 points in the second half...and we were able to snatch victory from the jaws of defeat."

After Christmas, with an above average record, the Lady Lions hosted bitter enemy Pittsburg.

"With a 7-4 record, we lost to Pittsburg at home, and then beat Lincoln on the road, but lost to Southeast Missouri, and then played the biggest game of the season, when we beat a top 20 Washburn team. We went on to play a stretch of six games in twelve days, and we simply got tired. Physically and mentally, and the confidence in our shooting dipped and morale fell," commented Ballard.

Ballard feels that a certain game hurt the team, and left a 'bad taste in his mouth'.

"The loss to Southwest Baptist is the only game that we've really lost that made me sick to my stomach. We had the top three of ten free throw shooters in the conference on the line in the last minute, and we went one for five. This was the only game that we lost when we had the lead in the last two minutes of the game. The players played hard and lost. That hurt," said Ballard.

When Ballard arrived at Southern a year ago, people in the organization preached to him again and again that being good took time! Though he hates it, he understands it.

"It does take time, and they told me it would take some time, but I'm not used to losing...and I do not intend to get used to it. I don't like it!," said Ballard. ☸

LIONS FOOTBALL

Football Profile

Lamonte Blanford

"Lamonte is what college athletes are all about. He has a great attitude about life and takes his playing seriously. Lamonte does all he can on the field. He exemplifies what a student athlete is all about."

Coach Lantz

Grinding out wins and losses in the mud and rain of the 'grid iron' known as the Hughes Stadium, the Lions roared once again to a good, productive season.

"All in all, we have had a very good season." Stated Lion's head coach, John Lantz. "The record wasn't what we wanted it to be, but our players played very well, and I'm very proud of them."

Winning four out of nine games during the season, Lantz said that the team easily could have turned the number around, from 4-5...below the .500 mark, to 6-3...well over the average mark.

"We wanted the final outcome to be higher and well over the average mark.

Already, the team is setting their sights for next year, losing some seniors to graduation, still relying on the second and third year players, recruiting new athletic wonders, and proudly watching the freshman players, learning and growing to better the program.

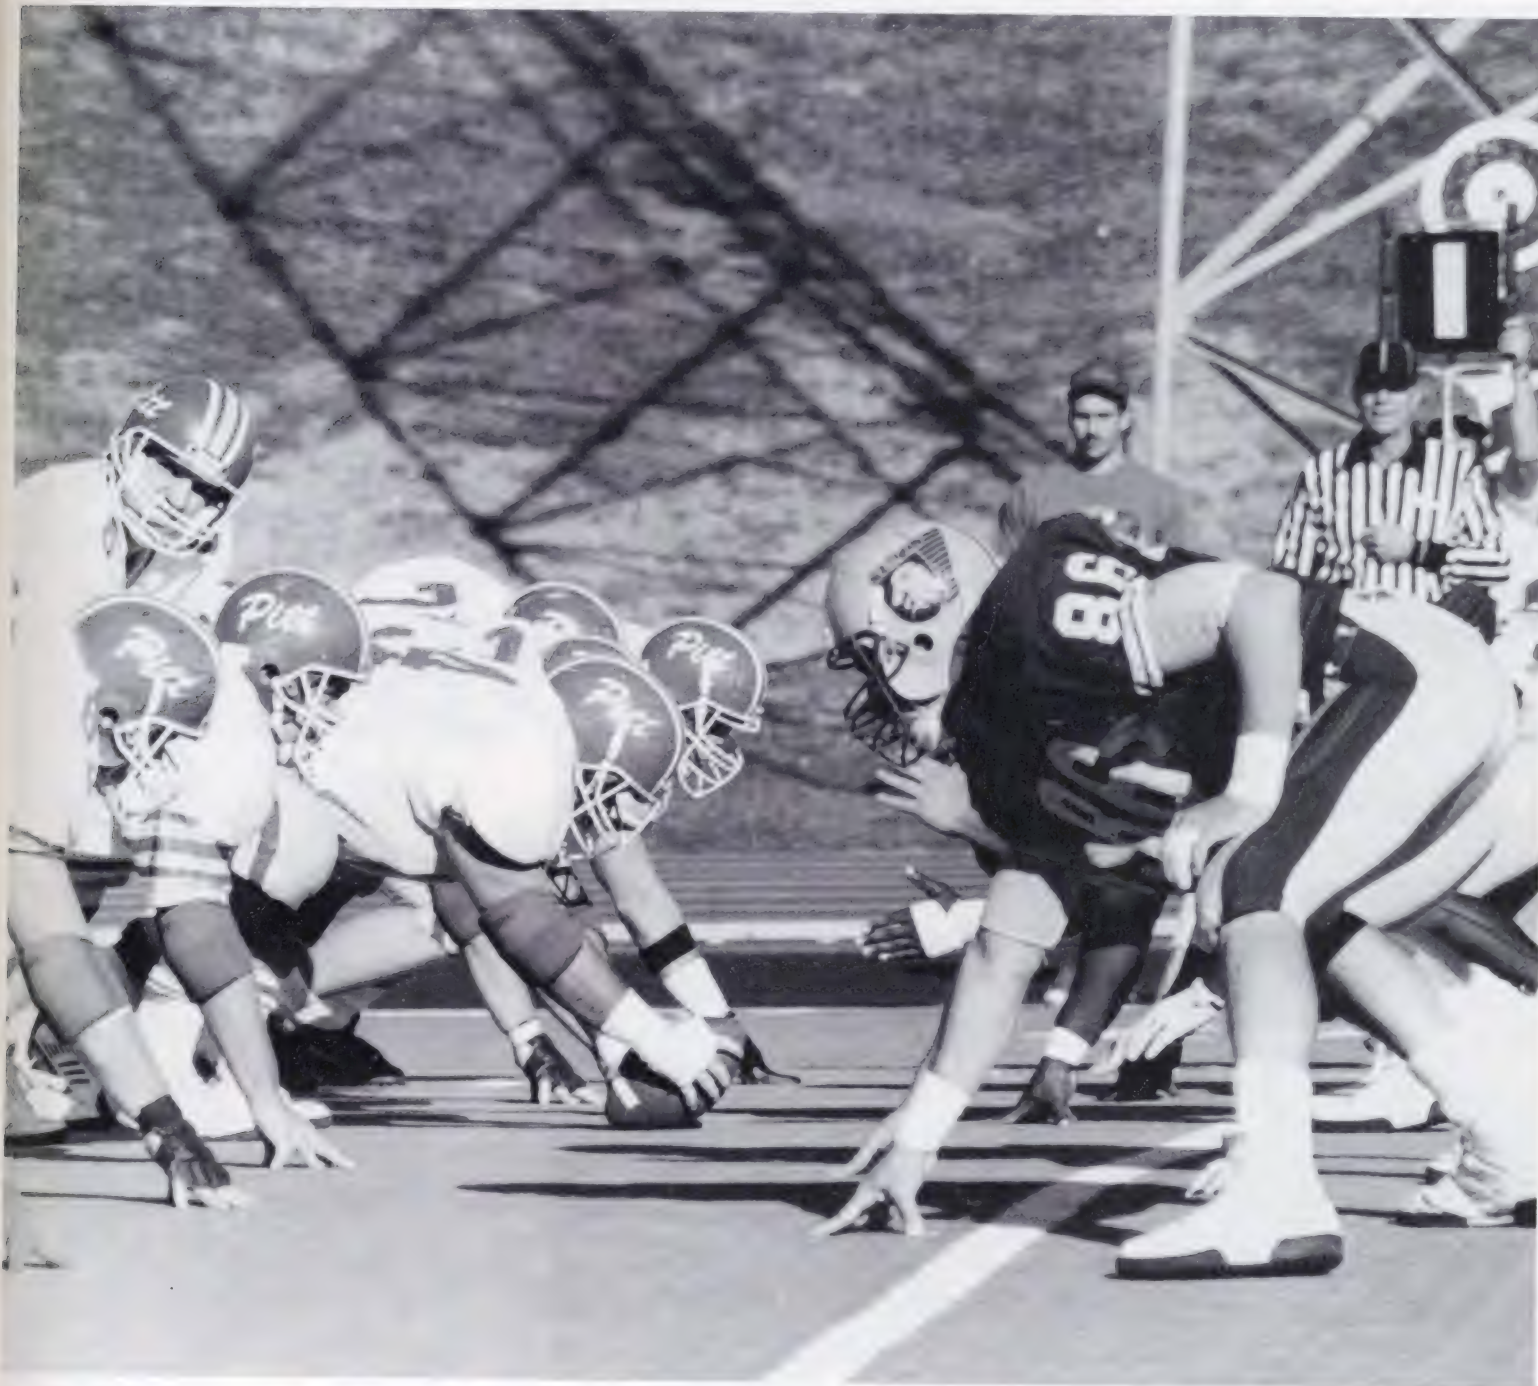

According to Lantz, the future...the near future, is growing brighter even though they compete in a very tough conference.

"We will return 18 starters so the future is indeed bright for Southern football, and in the last two years we have a 10-9 record, and I think we're almost at that point of turning the corner.

"I think the players will be up to the task," said Lantz. ♻️

The international sport of soccer began slowly at Missouri Southern, but then took off with a kick. In 1972 soccer was classified as a club sport and was coached by Hal Bodon, communications instructor. Four long years later, in 1976, soccer became an intercollegiate sport supported by the athletic department. The program continues to become bigger and better every year.

The players practice two hours a day, five days a week and have a game every Saturday. The first three weeks of school the players also practice in the mornings. Players are expected to excell in the classroom as well as on the field.

The soccer team in the past has played internationally in Europe.

In the nineteen years the program has been on campus there have been only three coaches, Scott Portner, present; Jack Spurlin, two years; Hal Bodon, 15 years. ♻️

CROSS COUNTRY

Free time for Higinio Couarrubias is spent running. Ever since he can remember, running has been a source of enjoyment. Couarrubias, a biology major, is a walk-on member of the Missouri Southern Cross Country team.

"I felt that I was a good enough runner to walk on this year," said Couarrubias. "When I accomplished this, I was very proud of myself."

Couarrubias chose to attend Southern because of the fact the cross country program is very young.

"I knew that the program was only its second year and that drew me here," he said. "I thought that I could come here and help build the program right away."

Couarrubias, a 1990 graduate of Knob Noster High School in Knob Noster, Mo., is the son of Higinio and Elanda Couarrubias. He has a sister, Christina. He had a very successful cross country and track career. Qualifying for state in track his sophomore year and cross country his junior and senior years are accomplishments worthy of pride for an athlete.

"I was proud of all three of these accomplishments," said Couarrubias. "This gave me the confidence I needed to walk on in college."

Preferring to run long distances instead of sprints is why he chose to try out for the cross country team.

"I just think I am better at running long distances," he said. "I don't know why I am better at it, I just am."

Although biology is his choice for a career he has not ruled out sharing his knowledge and experience in the sport of track.

"I would love to be a track coach," Couarrubias said. "I would love to teach the next generation of children the things that I have learned about track." ☼

WELLNESS

Mark Ancell

☐ Lifting off, the player is successful hitting the ball.

Teaching students of the serious health problems running rampant in our society today is the major task of Missouri

Southern's Lifetime Wellness class.

"The course covers current health concerns that people of all ages are curious about," said Tom Rutledge, Lifetime Wellness instructor. "The course also teaches some health care information that is particularly relevant to college-age adults."

Rutledge is happy that Southern has included the class into the curriculum, and feels there is a need for the students to participate in the classes and to heed what is taught.

"As a physical education instructor, I have always seen the need for all people to include physical activity in their lifestyle. You do not have to be a competitive athlete to know that some form of exercise and a healthy diet should be considered at all ages," said Rutledge.

Rutledge stresses that we should all be concerned about the environment we live in, and that there are only two weapons that can shield us from the dangers the environment emits.

"The environment we exist in creates new health care concerns for all of us," Rutledge said. "Education and prevention are the key for all of us to lead longer, healthier and more productive lives." ♻️

CHEERLEADING

Who says that practicing over four hours a week since June 1 is easy? What about memorizing the 45 chants and making all the signs for the games? So why do people want to become cheerleaders? It must be to meet people, get in shape, or maybe it's to go to the camp at UCA in which 500 women and men participate.

Cheerleading has become extremely competitive with fourteen women and three men trying out. Eight made the team and they were all women. One man was selected to be the mascot, the big proud lion.

Timing and cooperation means everything. The cheerleaders work with the band to get the routines "just right." Traci Good says it's worth it to see the crowd get fired up for the football and basketball games. ♻️

Originating in 1988, the year-round sport of Rugby is gaining in popularity as Americans experiment with new, radically different forms of entertainment in the sports arena.

Rugby, an international sport, is played by many different countries around the globe. The game of Rugby is of European descent and has quite a following in the United States.

It can safely be compared with football. They both have moments of running intermingled with quick decisions and full contact ranging from pushing and grabbing to an all-out, classic, "pile-up" tackle. Rugby which is played on a field slightly bigger than Hughes Stadium, has the ever-present goal post, goal line (Tri-line in Rugby) and the important score.

To play on the Missouri Southern team one only has to have the will to play; bruises are a fringe benefit, as no pads are worn. The players do take some licks out on the field. A potential player must be in fairly good cardiovascular shape as there are two long forty minute halves of non-stop action. There are no substitutes allowed!

Players say Rugby is a combination of soccer and football. It takes the stamina of soccer and the strength of football in the way the ball is kicked and in the tackling for possession. The men of Rugby have to play not only offense but defense as well.

Camaraderie is the single best word to describe the game and the players of Rugby. ♻️

WHY RECYCLE?

Recycling saves energy, natural resources and landfill space. For example, by recycling paper it is possible to save 64% of the energy that it would take to manufacture new products from virgin materials. Similar energy savings are possible through recycling other materials, including aluminum (95%), copper (87%), and glass (35%). For every ton of paper manufactured from recycled pulp, 17 trees and 3 cubic yards of landfill space are saved. Additionally, production of recycled paper generates only one-quarter the air pollution than production of virgin paper.

While 80% of our waste can be recycled using exciting technologies, only 26% is recycled. The average American regenerates 3.5 pounds of waste every day for a national total of over 160 million tons per year. Total U.S. waste production per person is twice that of any other country in the world.

By the year 1991, half of the landfills in this nation will close. While incineration is an alternative, the potential environmental effects of the process, as well as the often prohibitive costs of burning, make a serious commitment to recycling an essential element in our efforts to avoid being buried in our own garbage in the decade ahead. William C. Burns, Division of Environmental Affairs, Earth Care Papers Inc., Madison, WI. ♻️

ENVIROMENTAL AGENDA FOR THE 1990s Goal

1 The preservation of old growth forests and tropical forests.

- ❑ Don't buy products made from tropical hardwoods such as teak and mahogany.
- ❑ Boycott fast food restaurants that serve beef raised in tropical rainforests.
- ❑ Urge your congressional representative to increase support for programs to slow tropic deforestation.
- ❑ Urge your congressional representative for an immediate moratorium on further logging or road building in old-growth forest that are part of the national forest system.
- ❑ Recycle newspapers and other paper products to reduce the demand on trees.

Goal

2 Slow the rate of global warming through dramatic reductions in carbon dioxide emissions and emissions of other of other "greenhouse gases."

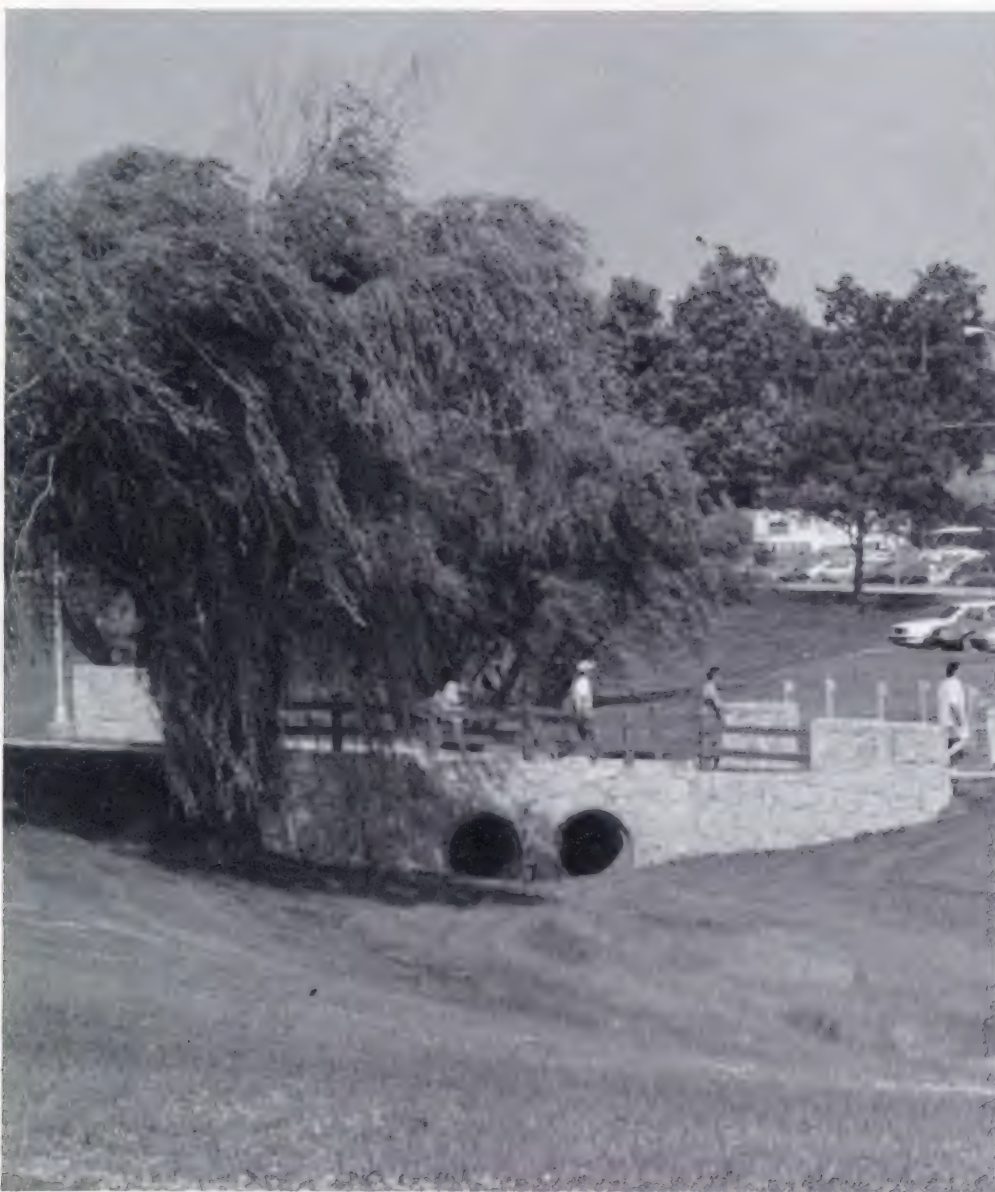

- ❑ Reduce CO₂ emissions by adopting energy conservation measures at home and by purchasing more fuel efficient automobiles.
- ❑ Plant trees.
- ❑ Urge legislators to support legislation promoting energy efficiency.
- ❑ Support alternative energy programs.

Goal

3 A swift transition to renewable energy resources.

The following renewable energy resources provide the most promise:

- ▣ Solar energy
- ▣ Geothermal energy
- ▣ Hydropower
- ▣ Windpower

Goal

4 Dramatic increases in residential and industrial energy efficiency.

- ❑ Purchase more energy efficient lighting products.
- ❑ When shopping for large appliances, consult the Most Energy-Efficient Appliances booklet.
- ❑ Weatherproof and insulate your home.
- ❑ Purchase energy-efficient automobiles and utilize mass transportation and bicycles.
- ❑ American industries should be mandated to increase industrial efficiency and recycle materials.

Goal

5 The adoption of strong recycling programs in every community and a ban on packaging that is not recyclable or biodegradable.

- ❑ REDUCE the amount of garbage you generate by purchasing and using products wisely.
- ❑ REUSE products whenever possible.
- ❑ RECYCLE all materials where possible.
- ❑ ENCOURAGE the use of recycled products.

Goal

6 A comprehensive hazardous waste program, emphasizing source reduction.

- ▣ Support source reduction legislation and stricter standards for hazardous waste facilities.
- ▣ Write to corporations and encourage them to reduce the volume of waste they produce.
- ▣ Reduce the amount of chemical products you purchase and dispose of old ones at a hazardous waste collection site.

Goal

7 Worldwide ban on chlorofluorocarbons (CFC) to be fully adopted within five years and a reduction in the use of halons.

- ❑ Immediately repair any leaks in your refrigerator and ask that CFCs be recycled.
- ❑ Don't purchase a car with air conditioning.
- ❑ Consider alternatives to air conditioning in your home.
- ❑ Choose alternatives to rigid foam insulation that contains CFCs.
- ❑ Purchase a fire extinguisher that is halon-free.
- ❑ Ask your legislators to support more rapid phase-out of CFCs and funding for alternatives.

Goal

8 Heightened protection for endangered species and habitats.

- ❑ Avoid purchasing endangered species.
- ❑ Urge elected officials to support legislation to preserve wilderness and natural habitats.
- ❑ Urge congressional support for programs to slow tropical deforestation.
- ❑ Avoid purchasing products that are produced using methods that threaten species.

Goal

9 A new sense of responsibility for the protection of the planet by individuals, communities, and nations. A powerful international agency with authority to safeguard global commons, such as the atmosphere and the oceans, from international threats.

All nations share the world's atmosphere and oceans. All nations of the world must join in a spirit of cooperation to address the imposing global problems of environmental degradation that face us. Implementation of international pollution standards, funding of renewable energy resources and worldwide bans on environmentally destructive products are a few of the measures that can truly make this the decade of the environment.

It is evident that to make a difference requires, among other things, dedication. To make a difference we all do a little extra, believe a little more, work a little harder, and act a little better. The staff of the 1990-91 yearbook, "the diehards", showed me how a few (and I mean a FEW) can move mountains. And when one mountain was moved, they went after another one.

Christina, "the doing it all woman" never let me down. If it had not been for Brian, well, the book might never have been published. Midyear, he took over as production editor and kept me organized when I could not find a single solitary thing. T. Rob...what can I say? I can still hear him telling all about his pictures and this is the way I want to remember him. Kevin pulled us out when we needed creative writing talent.

Jason, Alice, Greg R., Greg W., Eddie, Sharon and Aaron was certainly instrumental in the success of the book.

Larry Meacham; public information, Dennis Slusher; sports information; and Chris Cox, The Chart, without your photos we would have had a lot of blank spaces. Thank you!

There is another group of people that made a great difference to the yearbook staff--all the people who put up with us in the communications office. Morris Sweet saved us more than once and Sharen Brown forgave us when the scissors were not returned. We even learned how to say picture correctly thanks to Marie Capps.

What we accomplished this year will have made a difference. The book is produced on recycled paper, a step in the right direction. By using the recycled paper for the 2,300 copies, we have saved 50 trees. I want to thank Missouri Southern's administration for supporting this effort to make a difference.

The staff also chose to adopt a high-way. This additional responsibility clearly showed me dedication and passion in making a stand for what this book is all about—making a world of difference.

It was long hours, tears, crazy laughter, and sometimes hopelessness but the book is finished, and the satisfaction and the sense of accomplishment is something that I will remember for the rest of my life.

I feel that we have made a difference. "Never doubt that a small group of thoughtful, committed citizens can change the world: indeed, it's the only thing that ever has." Margaret Mead

Margaretha Lodin

Your 1990-91 yearbook represents the tireless efforts of a very dedicated, determined editor, Margaretha Lodin. An interesting sideline about Lodin is her nationality-

Swedish. How appropriate for us to have had an international editor in the beginning year of our international mission. A person with any less commitment would have folded under the pressures of deadlines, cramped quarters, and new computer technology.

Thanks to Christina Watkins, projects were planned and promoted to involve everyone. She applied for the position of promotions director and we let her do that, too!

Hats off to the rest of the staff for their creative input and support. Every effort brings experience and learning. Not only has the staff learned how to do some things, but they have also learned what not to do next time.

This group of people was unrelenting in its effort to publish the book on recycled paper. Do you believe the environment is a global issue? Do you think that you can make a difference? We do!

COLOPHON:

Volume 53 of the Missouri Southern State College Crossroads was printed and bound by Herff Jones Inc. of Shawnee Mission, Ks. Press run was 2300 copies. All copy and design were created on the M intosh IICX system by the Crossroads staff using the Aldus Pagemaker program and the Pagemaster application. Headlines, body copy and captions were set in Times and effects were done in Rapheal.

Paper used for pages was 80 pound Simpson Evergreen Gloss (recycled). Four color pages are printed in Soybean ink because of the absences of petro chemical oils. Both are environmental statements. Endsheets were 65 pound white text printed in ultra purple. The cover, designed by Gregory Willson, was vista white litho with a five color process.

Portraits were taken by Sudlow Photography of Danville, Ill.

Crossroads is published by the department of communications and completed March 1, 1991. All full students who paid the $10 Crossroads fee may receive a copy.

Inquiries should be addressed to Crossroads, Missouri Southern State College, 3950 Newman Road, Jonesboro, MO 64801-1595.
